The man who pays the least taxes usually kicks the most about the way the town is run.

The railroad men are again talking about striking, which shows how easy it is to dig up a buried hatchet when the handle is left sticking out of the ground.

A man may not be much of an artisan in turning out his own work, but he is right there with the goods when it comes to telling another fellow how to do his.

Rather surprising is the statement of the "Boston Globe" that the board bill for American rats is $182,000,000 annually. We didn't know that paris green was so expensive.

Prohibition was defeated in Missouri, and for another year or so at least the fashions for men shown by the tailors in that State will continue to provide for two hip pockets.

In New York the other day $475 was paid for a signature of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, European war, or whatever it is, seems to have boosted signatures as well as potatoes.

Greenwich man who rolled a loaf of bread down the street on an election bet got a bigger notice in the newspapers than he would have been given had he presented the town with a free library.

Comes the news that the Denver school teachers have shortened twelve words. This should enable them to close up the schoolhouse and get out on the tennis court about fifteen minutes sooner.

Beginning to look as if we would have to get an adding machine if we want to keep count of all those who have received postcards from friends in Germany that were brought over on the Deutschland.

Those who are expecting much in the way of general legislation at the coming session of Congress are probably doomed to disappointment. It is the short session continuing but three months, for the present Congress expires by constitutional limitation on the fourth of March. Meeting on the first Monday of December it will be unusual if much is done before the holidays.

DURING MAJESTIC WEEK WE will sell field fencing, hardware and garden ware at 20 per cent less than you can buy it after January 1, 1917.
