As the bridal party entered the choir sang Lohengrin's Wedding Hymn, and as the first notes were sounded Miss Ethel Herndon, of Durham, maid of honor, approached the altar; then came the bride, wearing champagne colored voile, en train, lace trimmings, upon the arm of her brother, W, E. Dorsey, of Kinston. At the same time the groom with his best man, Col. Sidney W. Minor, entered from the study and joined the bride in front of the altar.

The ushers, Dr. I. H. Davis and R. L. Hamilton and F. H. Gregory, of Florence, S. C., and Jno. S. Dorsey. of South Boston, Va., placed themselves on either side of the altar. As the soft strains of the chorus were hushed Rev. Jno. S. Hardaway imressively spoke the words that ce mented two hearts into a blessed and happy union, the bride being given away by Mr. W. E. Dorsey, Mendelssohn's wedding march has lost none of its sweetness through all these years and as Mr. and Mrs. Gulick and attendants left the church

it performed the same sweet task posed of Messrs. F. W. Hancock, to the second Monday in July, and that makes it dear to all the world. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dorsey, near ()xford, and is deservedly one of the most charming women of our community. Nature has been very graclous in its gifts to her, and one is rarely blessed in a larger measure than she has been, Her charm of manner, beauty of face, grace of form, with a highly cultured mind, have combined in her in such perfect proportions as to develop a loveliness of character which wins and holds the devotion of all who knew her.

The groom is so well known to the people of this county that to attempt to add anything to his reputation would be but to relate facts already deeply impressed upon all whose good fortune it is to know this splendid type of Southern manhood, He lived in Oxford from 1882 to 1898 and during all this time he enjoyed the most cordial esteem and perfect confidence of the entire community. When he left Oxford in 1898 every citizen felt that the town had sustained a distinct loss.
