Trading a Specialty, and How I Trade. The study of successful trading is a science that has addled the brains of some of the cleverest men that this country has produced. A few have made a success of it, many a failure. Those who have achieved success, and consequently fortunes, have done so by devoting years of thought and study to the subject, making it a business, and conducting their trading in the markets with the same application and common sense principles that they would apply to any other vocation. Just as the legal or medical practitioner becomes an adept or "specialist" in his particular calling, so the trader in the markets becomes a "specialist" and by
