Let the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his muscles would soon fail. Physi-cal strength is derived from food. If a man has insufficient food he loses strength. If he has no food he dies. Food is con-verted into nutrition through the stom-sole and howels. It downeds on the verted into nutrition through the stom-ach and bowels. It depends on the strength of the stomach to what extent food eaten is digested and assimilated. People can die of starvation who have abundant food to eat, when the stomach and its associate organs of digestion and nutrition do not perform their duty. Thus the stomach is really the vital or-gan of the body. If the stomach is "weak" the body will be weak also, because it is upon the stomach the body relies for its strength. And as the body, considered as a whole, is made up of its several mem-bers and organs, so the weakness of the body as a consequence of "weak" stom-ach will be distributed among the or-gans which compose the body. If the ach will be distributed among the or-gans which compose the body. If the body is weak because it is ill-nourished that physical weakness will be found in all the organs—heart, liver, kidneys, etc. The liver will be torpid and inactive, giving rise to biliousness, loss of appetite, weak nerves, feeble or irregular action of heart, nalpitation, diziness, headache heart, palpitation, dizziness, headache, backache and kindred disturbances and Mr. and Mrs. Best
