

Avoid Danger

When you are sick, or suffering from any of the troubles peculiar to women, don't delay—take Cardui, that well-known and successful remedy for women. Thousands of women have used Cardui and been benefited. Why not you? Don't take any chances. Get Cardui, the old, reliable, oft-tried remedy, for women of all ages.

TAKE CARDUI

It Will Help You

Mrs. Luzania Morgan, Sneedville, Tenn., writes: "For ten years I suffered with the turn of life, and tried many remedies without relief. I had pains all over my body and at times I could not sit up. At last I took Cardui and now I can do my housework. I have told many ladies about Cardui and recommend it to all sick women." Try it.

ness. He will sleep on the cold ground, when the winter winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his masters side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guard the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince.

"When all other friends desert, he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his high love as the sun in its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth as outcast into the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard him against dangers, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of comes and death takes his master in its embrace and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even to death."

The animal kingdom affords no other example of such loyalty. The cat tribe has no such qualities. As Senator Vest says, man himself shows no such devotion to fellow-man as does the dog to his master. The tribute to the faithfulness is worthy of repetition and presenting before the new generation.—Washington Herald.

BY-PRODUCTS ON FARM.

Small Things That Have Been Given But Little Attention Now Are Taken Care of.

The modern manufacturer has been distinguished by the use of by-products—that is, by the utilization of things that formerly were considered waste. In the great packing houses of Chicago, every drop of blood, every bone, every atom is utilized, turned to account.

It has recently been announced that a chemist has discovered the means of extracting alcohol from the wood used for making paper and that he has benefited instead of injuring the paper. He has his alcohol for his profit, and will make ultimately a large reduction in the cost of paper if his expectations are realized.

The farmer ought to see what he can make out of the by-products, out of the fence corners, out of the wood lot, out of the garden out of the orchard.

Every farmer should have a number of nut trees, especially in the South should the farmer plant pecans. He may not live to see the full results of it, but his children will rise up and call him blessed.

Plant nut trees. They will not require much attention, but a little attention will be richly rewarded.

Plant fruit trees. We do not mean plant an orchard. The profits of an orchard depends upon local conditions, soil, climate and market. We think there is room for a great many orchards in the South, but we mean now that the farmer who is not going into fruit raising as a business ought to plant fruit trees in order that he may supply the needs of his family and have a surplus to market. We use these merely as illustration of our meaning. There are many ways by which the income of a farm can be increased by a little thought and by which the interests of every person on the farm can be deepened, by giving to each boy and girl something for his or her own. If you are not going to raise pigs on a large scale, raise them on a small scale. If you are not going to raise chickens for the market, raise chickens for your own table. You farm that you may live. The farmer ought to live better than anybody else. This does not mean that his table ought to groan under all varieties of rich food, but he ought to have a table that is abundant with the good things that he himself can raise.—Home and Farm.

NO LOVE LIKE THE DOG'S Vest's Famous Tribute to Man's Best and Most Loyal Friend—Will Stick to Very Last.

Frequenters of the old Police Court in this city will remember the clippings of Senator Vest's eulogy of the dog which were pasted on the walls there. The speech was made by the Senator while serving as attorney in the prosecution of a man who had wantonly shot the dog of a neighbor. The plaintiff had sued for $200, but after hearing Senator Vest, the jury returned a verdict for $500.

The speech, which will stand as a tribute to man's best friend, is as follows:

"Gentlemen of the jury: The best friend a man has in the world may turn against him and become his enemy. His own daughter that he has reared with loving care may become ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness, and our good name may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him when he may need it most. Man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees and do so honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The absolutely unselfish friend a man may have in this selfish world the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is the dog.

"Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and in sick-
