MR. CREWS TELLS THE FARMERS HOW TO ENRICH THEIR LAND.

He Expatiates on How it Should be Done and Advises the Use of Annual Clover—Gives an Illustration. Well we will try to write again this week. I think I showed you what thought had done for Doctor White and those other tobacco men last week. Now lets see what it will do for us in the future (farmers I mean). Mr. John Hall told me of a conversation he heard between two men lately about how to enrich land. I will give it to you.

A man said to another: "How did you get your land so rich? I was on your land about ten years ago and it was very poor. I was on it last week and it was as rich land as I ever saw." The other replied: "Yes, it is as rich as I want it. I got it rich in this way. I sowed my place in annual clover and when I laid off my corn rows left 18 inches between each row I did not break. I ran my rows wider than usual, about 5-12 feet wide, and cultivated the corn till I laid it by. Then the clover was well matured, stalks and all. When the dew had dried off the clover, I split the 18 inch clover in two with a plow throwing half of it one way and half the other. The clover being hard and dry the seed scattered and reseeded the land for another year. I did the same thing for six years. Each year I plowed a little deeper till on the 6th I plowed 18 inches deep at that time. My land was as rich as I wanted it. I find my land does not wash, nor does dry weather effect my crop. I only bought seed once and made it reseed the land each year."

Now this is a cheap and simple plan and I believe every word of it and will try it. I have been sowing annual clover in my corn for two years. Last year I thought it was almost a failure so I let the land rest this year. The clover had covered enough on the land to seed it now and I am going to plow by his directions. I did not leave the 18 inches in the middle of the row as he did. I plowed the clover under when it had matured and cultivated corn as usual and now I think the clover will reseed the land.

And here he comes to tell you farmers, do you know what Mr. Hall's business is? He is a seedsman and here he comes to tell us farmers how to save seed. If that isn't philanthropy I don't know the meaning of the word. He also tells the farmers how to save their seed. He says Mr. John Pleasants says the best way is to take your wagon to the field when the clover is dry; have a tight body or box and take the clover and thresh it over bed or box. I am going to try this plan myself. Mr. Hall says the man that told him how he had made his land rich looked like a practical and sensible man.

Brother Farmers, use your brains.
H. E. CREWS.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

In the Public Ledger of May 6th, Mr. Lewis De LaCroix of Oxford has a sensible article, in regard to paying County officers salaries, instead of fees, and continuing them in office when they do not want to be. As to paying salaries, I think that should depend on the size of counties and the amount of business done in them. In small counties fees would hardly give officers a bare living. In medium-sized counties fees would be just about a fair compensation for services. But in large and wealthy counties fees yield more than reasonable support and in these it would be right to put the county officers on a reasonable salary.

I agree fully with Mr. de LaCroix, that it is unwise to change county officers too often. It takes a man at least one term of office to learn to do his work well. The second or third term he can make a better officer. And from this time on he is ready to serve his county to the very best advantage. We have had a good man, who are faithfully performing their duties, why turn them out after a short term of service?

When these men were elected to their present offices they had to give up the business in which they were then engaged. To put them out of office, would be to put them out of business; they would have to begin again in business.

The new men elected to their office, would have to give up their present business, and spend a year or two in learning their new business and then in a year or two be thrown out of both office and business. Such a procedure is evidently unwise and unfair to office holders.

But some one says, the profits of these county offices ought to be divided out among different men. Has any officer in Granville, by serving one term, made a fortune, and got ready to retire to private life? In fact has office of any one furnished him more than a bare living?

Is it not wise to let well enough alone?
