A Physician's Faith in Tuberculosis Medicine

"Have used it in several cases of tubercular glands of the neck, with excellent results every time. In one case it cost me $50. for the girl was put on it only until she could arrange to be operated, and in a wee, short time an operation was just as fine as of old. You know my faith in the medicine." Eckman's Alternative is the "medicine" referred to. Original of above letter on file at office of Eckman Mfg. Co., Philadelphia.

Eckman's Alternative is good for throat and lung trouble and is on sale in

The One Crop to Flow Under.

The crimson clover crops comes at a season when it is especially hard to cure it well for hay, and I have long since come to the conclusion that the best use for crimson clover is for making corn and cotton. We can let the clover come to full maturity and die and then plow it under and have time in all parts of the South to make a crop of corn, and in the far South, to make a cotton crop.

I have seen a great deal of crimson clover made into hay, but have never seen a first-class lot of hay made from it, as it is either bleached by the sun, or if properly cured in cocks is apt to mold more than any other hay. Then, too, if the cutting is delayed till the heads elongate and get brown below, the hay is rather dangerous for horses. Hence, I believe that I would always make an exception of crimson clover and use it as manure direct.—W. F. Massey in Raleigh (N. C.) Progressive Farmer and Gazette.

A QUIET SPOT.

DID you ever think of looking. When in search of calm, secure, in a boiler shop, dear brother, where the strokes are swift and sure, where the heavy iron sledges, making music as they fall, drown the gabble and the chatter of the man who knows it all?

There's the rapping of the hammer is against the iron plates, Not against some wayward neighbor Who has trouble with his dates; They're found the shapeless metal, Into from they mold the ore, But they do not keep a-tapping On the man who lives next door.

Though your nerves may shrink in terror From the bedlam of the place As it gallops forth its noises At an ear destroying pace, You may have the satisfaction That the man who follows here To inform you on the tariff Cannot dent the atmosphere.

While the place is not ideal For the man whose nerves are strung, Yet the shop has this advantage— Nothing doing for the tongue. Though the noise is as a battle When two armies meet in strife, It may lure the chap whose hobby Is to lead a quiet life.

Useful Accomplishment.

"He is a great acrobat. He can walk on his hands nearly as well as on his feet."

"How very useful!" "Don't get sarcastic. He isn't going with a circus."

"No, but I speak seriously, believe me. Now, for instance, if he were ever to drown they wouldn't have to roll him on a barrel to get the water out of him when they went to resuscitate him. He could stand on his hands and let the water run out."

So Pathetic.

"Going to the funeral?" "What funeral?"

"Hadn't you heard about it?" "No."

"The peach crop has been killed."

Hard Luck.

"You look so dismal." "Yes; this is a hard world."

"Why, I thought you just had a vacation way down in the country." "I did, and what do you think I found?"

"A soft snap, I'll bet." "Not on your life. The bread was hard, the bed was hard, the walking round the place was hard, and even the water was hard."

Theatrical Ambition.

"I want to be an actress." "Do you, indeed?" said the manager sarcastically.

"And I presume you want to be a star?" "No."

"No? This is surprising." "I want to be a comet."

Job For Him.

"Percy, I understand you are a vegetarian." "Yes, ma'am. That is the way I live."

"Would you mind gnawing off the grass in the front yard? The lawn mower is broken, and the grass needs a hair cut."

Plenty of Company.

"There are a lot of fools on this earth."

"Are there?" "Yes; I meet 'em every day."

"Seems sociable, doesn't it?"

Mr. Easy Mark.

"Who is your favorite friend?" "My favorite friend?"

"Yes." "The chap who is present and will lend me a dollar."

Returned With Thanks.

Returning stuff he could not use, The editor chuckled with the rest His bill for rent. He said, "I fear The style will hardly meet our test."

A Policeman.

"Looking for trouble?" "Yes."

"It is down the alley." "Thanks. I'll go up the street."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Being amusing, according to some persons, is sufficiently justifying your existence.

Don't expect to get any more than the other fellow has to give.

A woman hates to take her hat off at the theater as badly as a man hates not to go out between the acts.

Reason is the thing that has so little to do with most of our acts.

No use to attempt to talk sense to a man who doesn't understand the language of sense.

Any man knows that all there is to housekeeping is broiling a steak or boiling a few potatoes and occasionally taking a turn at the dishpan. And now even the steak is eliminated.

A man marries a woman thinking her a pattern of all the virtues, but often finds her a pattern of only one, and that the one he cares least about.

A great many people are charitable—to their own fallings.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THERE are individuals who seem to cultivate feelings for the sole purpose of leaving them outside to get hurt.

Be patient, my child, and let who will be happy.

Some men are famous and others are simply great.

There are many ways of running a business, but talking doesn't seem to rank at all in the list.

Of course there are two sides to every proposition. If you can't see it listen awhile to people who are fighting over it.

Not knowing any surer way of keeping their grouches, many men preserve it in alcohol.

It seems so easy for persons we don't like to tread on our corns.

You can't succeed without rousing a lot of envious people, who at once proceed to make you wish you could have made a failure brilliant enough to please them.

It takes a house afire to make a man forget a toothache, but it will do the business.

Educated.

Just think, our little Mary Jane Will graduate this year!

I bet the people all will stare And say, "Oh, see who's here!"

My, but she knows an awful lot! You never would have said She could have got so many facts In just one little head.

When I come home and want to know About the wars with Spain She doesn't have to get a book To make the matter plain, And if I want to spell a word Or straighten out a date She finds out what it is I want And gives it to me straight.

I bet you cannot give the year That Caesar conquered Gaul. I bet you cannot tell offhand Who built the Chinese wall.

Well, little things like that would not Be anything for her. Why, she can tell when the eclipse Must certainly occur.

You wouldn't think it, would you, say? Why, not so long ago She hardly knew her A B C's!

My, how the children grow! But she is going to graduate, That tiny little tot.

And she will do the thing up right, For my, she knows a lot!

Rictous Abundance.

"You have plenty of fresh milk?" asked the lady who was looking for summer board.

"Any amount of it." "And sweet, wholesome butter?"

"Tons and tons of it." "And fresh country eggs?"

"Eggs? We have them to throw at the strolling actors."

Good Enough.

"She is madly in love with him." "Is she?"

"She certainly is." "Do you think she will marry him?"

"No." "Why?"

"She says she thinks too much of him for that."

Been a Dead One.

"Don't you wish you were dead?" "What, I?"

"Yes." "No." "Life is so stupid that I do. Why don't you?"

"I don't like it. I've tried it."

Mark of Distinction.

"What is notable about him anyway?" "He was born with a full set of teeth."

"Judging from the way he struts around, I thought he might have been born with his boots on."

Had the Facts.

"I shall sue him for breach of promise." "But I thought you refused him."

"I did." "On what do you base your case?"

"Everybody knows that a woman's 'No' means 'Yes.'"

All the Same to Him.

"The cost of living is something frightful." "Yes, but I know a man it doesn't trouble."

"I'd like to know who he is." "The man that gets the handouts."

Lost Money.

"Just my luck." "What is the matter?"

"There is a dentist advertising that he will pull one tooth free, and not one of my family has the toothache."

Advancement.

It was the age of steel and steam, Of the electric spark, But now the age of gasoline Is here, as you may mark.

Mischief.

"What does a woman do when she doesn't know what else to do?"

"Goes out and adds to the expense account."
