

The Origin of Royster Fertilizers.

Mr. Royster believed that success awaited the Manufacturer of Fertilizers who would place quality above other considerations. This was Mr. Royster's idea Twenty-seven years ago and this is his idea to-day; the result has been that it requires Eight Factories to supply the demand for Royster Fertilizers.

Cloth Lodged in Bone.

From the Minneapolis Journal.
A small piece of cloth from his uniform coat carried by the bullet that shattered his arm when he was shot by burglars the night of January 7 was extracted from the arm of James J. McGuire, the East Side mounted patrolman.

McGuire has been confined to his home since the shooting, and the progress has not been satisfactory to the attending physicians. He complained of a steady pain in the arm. The cloth was carried deep into the arm by the bullet and had lodged inside the bone.
The pain ceased when the physicians removed the cloth, and McGuire is expected to report to duty soon.

PINCHOT NAMES ROOSEVELT?

Chief Issue of Progressives Is Who Shall Be President Nominee.

Akron (Ohio) Dispatch to the New York Times.
In a speech at the dinner given by the progressive Republicans of Ohio Gifford Pinchot, former forester of the United States, partly disclosed the chief issue of the progressives in his party is: Who shall be the presidential nominee in 1912? While he refrained from mentioning any names, many of the guests saw a close parallel between his description of what the candidates must be to win and the political and personal characteristics of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Mr. Pinchot's friend.

Mr. Pinchot began by reviewing the struggle between the people and the "special interests" and the growing demand "that the machinery of government shall in the future be more responsive to the popular will than it has been in the past." It was for such a purpose, he said, that the National Progressive Republican League was formed. While public mention of the 1912 nomination by responsible public men is not heard, Mr. Pinchot said "much quiet work is being done and the lines are already taking shape."

"I am a Republican," he continued, "and as such I am interested in the success of the Republican party as an instrument for securing the public welfare. In common with all other Republicans, I am deeply interested, and rightly so, in the next presidential nomination, but I differ from some others in being willing to speak out. The public interest is not apt to suffer from plain speaking. Thus far, however, I conform cheerfully to the prevailing custom, and express no opinion as to the Republican nominee will be or who he ought to be."

"But if we keep silent over it, we would also keep up a lively thinking. For this at least is sure: The Republican party cannot afford to risk its chance of victory in 1912 merely upon the hope of Democratic blunders. Time was when that was reasonably safe. Today it is a dependence distinctly less reliable than in the past. Also we need a larger issue."

"In 1912 the nominee himself will be more than half the platform. It is obvious therefore that the Republican candidate should be selected with peculiar care, and that he must have certain indispensable qualifications."

"First—He must have wisdom, courage, and genuine devotion to the welfare of the people."

"Second—He must be a progressive, and stand for popular government."

"Third—He must be a leader, whom the voters will follow with enthusiasm."

"Fourth—He must offer the party he is to lead a fair chance to win."

"These requirements are not unreasonable. No man not a reactionary can object to the simple standard they contain. And no man whatever can doubt that unless the next Republican national convention nominates a man who meets this test the party is sure to suffer. For these days the independent voters are increasing by leaps and bounds."

"There are, I believe, many men who feel as I do. I am a Republican; but I am an American first. I am a Republican, but I reserve the right to vote for what I believe. I would rather be right than be regular."

"The man who always votes a straight ticket has destroyed his own political effectiveness. He has simply counted himself out. The vote of the always regular Republican simply cancels the vote of the always regular Democrat. In effect the two are paired, and neither has an influence on the final result."

"Whatever is right and vital in the Republican party today is progressive. Whatever is not progressive is dying or dead. When any part of a living body dies, 'cut it off and cast it from thee,' or the death of the whole will follow. The Republican party cannot live half dead and half alive. It cannot continue half reactionary and half progressive. There has been doubt as to the issue. There is less today. We shall live, if we free ourselves from the gangrene of blind devotion to things that have gone by."

DIAZ LIKE WASHINGTON.

President of Mexico Surrounded by Brilliant and Patriotic Cabinet.

Akron (Ohio) Dispatch to the New York American.

The Mexican administration, in its president and cabinet, has no superior in the world. President Diaz bears the same relation to Mexico that Washington, Lincoln, and Grant bear to the American people. Through his wonderful influence over the Mexicans, he has brought his government to the very highest pitch of national integrity, progress, and success. His cabinet is unequalled, either in England, France, Germany, or the United States. In fact, he is surrounded by the most brilliant corps of men that can be found in any government.

The two leading members of the cabinet, Mr. Limantour and Mr. Creel, have no superiors anywhere. They are both men of great natural ability, trained in the best schools of England and the United States, speaking English and French fluently, and conversant with the problems of government and finance.

All of these officers are far removed from the necessity of labor, and their devotion to Mexico springs from nothing but a genuine desire to raise the people to a higher plane of education. They are true Latins, and great personal wealth is not a desideratum.

Millions upon millions of dollars of American capital have been invested in Mexico, and it is cared for by the Mexican government with the most scrupulous discrimination and justice.

The policy of a republic is so well grounded in the customs of the people that the death of any one cannot affect the fortune of the race or change the character of the government. In the inauguration of our republic we experienced setbacks in the first 25 years, and we had inherited the principles of freedom and representative government from England. Mexico started out upon new principles, and it is wonderful how she has adapted herself to the plans of democracy. I have no fear that the stable and great government which President Diaz has started will continue. Mexico and especially Mexico City, has many brilliant men, and, like Limantour and Creel, they will fill the gap which any emergency may require.

Capital will be fully protected, Mexican public and private obligations will be inviolable, justice will prevail, and the government will continue in its path of freedom, equality, and progress, which has been so broadly opened by its most glorious patriot, Porfirio Diaz.
