THE NOVELETTE.

THE RIGHT TWIN FOR JERRY

(By H. Louis Haybold)

"That's by ultimatum, Jerry," said Jerry's father slowly, and the finality of his tone lent emphasis to his words. "I'm tired of your devil-may-care ways and the wild crowd of young people you travel with. Cut it out, my son, find a girl like your mother, marry her and settle down. Or else get out and shift for yourself!"

Young Jerry Cowles, slumped in his chair, looked moodily up at his father towering over him. "Harsh words, dad!" he said soberly.

"Tha may be," growled his parent, "but I mean them, nevertheless. You've been no good to me or to yourself since you got out of college. Tearing around in that car of yours, smashing speed limits, fox trotting all night—Lord, Jerry, when I was your age—" he paused in exasperation as a mental picture passed before his eyes of himself at twenty-three, an industrious husband and father.

"I know, dad, but the times—" "The times be hanged!" ejaculated the older man. "They are over-worked nowadays as an excuse for any tomfoolery. What you need is a wife and a home o give you a sense of responsibility. Only, mind you, I have no use for the sort of girl you seem to fancy. Surely, somewhere, there's a girl who isn't all speed fiend, jazz, cigarette devotee, fashion plate—"

Jerry winced. Was his father visualizing Becky Lenox, to whom at least some of those terms applied? Becky Lenox, with whom he was frightfully smitten.

"Tell you what I'll do, Jerry. Marry the sort of girl I would welcome as my daughter-in-law and I'll furnish your home for a wedding present, settle on you now what would likely come to you on my death and take you into the business as junior partner. I'm that anxious to have you make a success of your life!"

Jerry rose impulsively. "I—I—thanks dad," he said. "I'll think it over."

But as he turned away to dress for the Lenox dance at the Lawn Club his heart was heavy within him. Becky was a little peach, but never in all the world would she meet his father's old-fashioned requirements. Yes, dad belonged to a bygone generation to whom a love for the prevailing style of dancing spelled no less than total moral depravity and for whom the slightest hint of artificiality in a girl's complexion utterly dimmed, and damned, whatever else of beauty she possessed.

It was during her intermission on the cool, darkened veranda that Jerry poured out his woes to the sparkling, daintily dressed piece of femininity that was Becky. And he used his predicament as an excuse for letting Becky know he loved her.

"You see, dear," he wound up earnestly, "I wouldn't speak before because I had nothing to offer you. And now, why, I'm afraid just because you're so gloriously up to date and—oh, snappy and full of pet that dad won't see you're the real thing and the only thing for me! You ought to have been born dowdy and homely and with spectacles or—why, Becky, what's up?"

For Becky had jumped up and was prouthing wildly about. "A, idea, old top!" she cried. And Jerry wondered if his mother had ever called his father that. "Introduce Bess to your father—but marry me!"

For Becky had a twin, identical in looks but the very opposite in tastes and characteristics. Given over to philology, philosophy and philanthropy, she had lately taken to wearing huge tortoise shell spectacles which lent her an air of as great a seriousness as eno could wish. Certainly, one look at her and Jerry's father would realize that his son would be under a calm and steady influence.

Now because Jerry was desperately in love and so temporarily blinded to all else, he fell right in with Becky's scheme, nor did he worry about the intended deception of his father. Once married o Becky, his father would surely capitulate to her charms and forgive he trick played upon him.

"If father approves or your sister, we'll elope. How about it, dear?" And Becky whispered "Yes," as would hae most any girl held close in the arms of a nice youth like Jerry.

With characteristic energy, Jerry put in motion at once the wheels of his plan. Told his father he was engaged to one of the Ledoux twins and invited him to supper with them to meet her. Sure he'd be surprised at the sort of a girl she was.

Bess, under heaven knows what inducements from Becky, had agreed to help matters along, and did her best to be entertaining. Ably she denounced the evils of modern existence, punctuating her remarks with pertinent allusions to ancient civilizations, theories of Kant and slum conditions abroad. Jerry's father sat as one absorbed, and when Jerry finally led her away to a play down in the village he gazed after them with an expression in his eyes which would vaguely have bothered Jerry.

It was late that evening when Jerry figuratively mopping his brow, deposited his companion at the door of the Lenox home. He was anxious to get back to his father and learn the verdict.

But as he turned away the door opened softly behind him.

The next morning Becky herself was in his arms. "Oh, Jerry," she moaned. "I've spent the most awful day. I've had nothing to do but think how we weren't being fair to your father, and he is just right about not wanting you to marry a flyaway creature like me and I'm sick of this jazzy life anyhow. I'm going to settle down and—oh, you didn't turn around and fall in love with Bess?"

"Why my little sweetheart!" Jerry drew her close. "Your sister is a fine girl and all that, but as for loving her instead of you: As for father—we'll tell him all about it and take the consequences!"

But when Jerry reached home he got the surprise of his life.

"Jerry, my boy," said his father, "I take back all I said about the crowd you travel with. Good Lord! Schopenhauer—law o Malthus—Aztec verbs. Thunderation, boy, how will you stand it? Couldn't you have picked out a happy medium?"

And Jerry, laughing, settled down to explain that he had.

DODSON WOULD STOP SALE OF CALOMEL

Says Calomel Is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite On Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

A Grateful Letter.

It is in trying conditions like that related below by Mrs. Geo. L. North of Naples, N. Y. that proves the worth of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. "Two years ago last summer" she says "our little boy had dysentery. At that time we were living in the country eight miles from a doctor. Our son was taken ill suddenly and was about the sickest child I ever saw. He was in terrible pain all the time and passed from one convulsion into another. I sent my husband for the doctor and after he was gone thought of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy in the cupboard. I gave him some of it and he began to improve at once. By the time the doctor arrived he was out of danger."

Hot Propaganda.

Augusta Chronicle)
A Coweta farmer makes the suggestion that each farmer shall raise one hog to the plow for the payment of taxes, because cotton can no longer be depended upon for bringing the necessary cash. "Some of our farmers," says The Sandersville Progress, "are not only raising one hog to the plow but quite a number of them, and they have found that by starting with the improved breeds they can make more clear money raising hogs than they could cultivating cotton under the most favorable conditions."

DURHAM-CHAPEL HILL ROAD IS NEARING COMPLETION

Expected To Be Completed Next Month.

Unless the mortality reckonings are wrong most of us now living in Durham will be here to take part in the celebration of the completion of the Durham-Chapel Hill Boulevard some time next month.

If the plans mature the highway will be something more than a thoroughfare. It will be beautiful in a way that will be restful to the eye. No road can be long or wearisome that is shaded by trees that have been selected for a purpose.

The width of the highway will be sixty feet, electrically lighted and with a water system that will be satisfactory.—Durham Sun.

—Red snow is an added attraction to the wonders of Rocky Mountain Park in Colorado. Countless billions of tiny organisms that reproduce in the cold environment are responsible, according to government experts. The coloration is more intensive a quarter of an inch below the surface and streaks often red as blood have a sweetish taste. Scientists believe that the spores may have been brought down from the Arctic by the Chinook winds.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR WOOD sawing and feed cutters, and we have the engines and cutters here at prices you can't beat. Hercules and Blizard and all we ask is a chance to show you. SAMUEL DAVIS, Clarksville, Va.
