THE PUBLIC LEDGER SPEAKS DIRECT TO 5860 PEOPLE FRANK HANCOCK IS.

It Requires A Roll Of Paper Five Miles Long To Print Each Edition

The Public Ledger now enjoys a bonafide subscription list of 5860. The paper is being mailed to this number of subscribers every Tuesday and Friday If each copy of the paper was laid on the ground edge to edge the edition would extend a distance of more than five miles.

We are under many obligations to all those who subscribed and renewed during the recent Public Ledger salesmanship contest. To Messrs Bain Bros., Managers of the contest, and to each of the contestants and committee of award the Public Ledger returns many thanks for the excellent manner in which the contest was conducted.

It is frequently asked what is to be gained by putting on a subscription contest and give away prizes?

The publishers of newspapers figure that the subscription list should cover the cost of blank paper and ink. If the publishesr, after meeting all the expense of the contest, realizes enough to pay for the blank paper and ink of all names added to the mailing list, he regards the result of the contest as being a fair business proposition. It enables the publisher to charge a higher rate for advertising. The advertiser wants results; he is satisfied to pay a higher rate if he gets results, and results come through the increased number of readers. The Public Ledger has revised its advertising rates, which can be had on application.
