General Marshall Calls for Support Of Bond Campaign

General George C. Marshall told 300 U. S. Savings Bonds volunteer workers from all over North Carolina at a dinner meeting in Raleigh that he thought it was not asking too much to press people to save with U. S. Savings Bonds for the protection of themselves and for the security of the nation's future. General Marshall was the guest speaker at the dinner and Governor W. Kerr Scott was host for the occasion. Governor Scott spoke and urged all North Carolinians to join in the spring U. S. Savings Bonds campaign to be called the "Opportunity Drive," and help their county chairmen and other county volunteer bond salesmen to go over the top in their quotas.

I. M. Bailey, Raleigh attorney-banker, and state chairman of the U. S. Savings Bonds Committee for North Carolina was toastmaster. He announced there would be regional meetings within the next three weeks and urged every county chairman to attend his region's meeting to discuss plans for the Opportunity Bond Drive. He said that county quotas will be assigned at these regional meetings. North Carolina's state quota he announced will be $12,000,000 in Series E Bonds. No Series F and G quotas will be given in this drive, he said.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Yancey, F. F. Lyon, R. K. Taylor, Mrs. T. O. Mullins and Mrs. R. M. Ray, all of Oxford, attended the dinner.

State College Hints

By RUTH CURRENT
A pressure cooker is a valuable piece of equipment—it saves time and fuel, there's much less danger of losing food, and the high temperature obtained in the pressure cooker destroys harmful bacteria found in the food.

It is also a good time for the home maker to check on her supply of lids and rings. If the bands from two-piece closures were removed and stored in a dry place, they will be ready for this season's use. The bands left on jars often rust and may be ruined in removing them from the jar.

The next thing to check on is the supply of jars.

If the boiling water canner is no longer usable, it's time to begin looking for equipment to replace it. And if the home equipment includes a boiling water canner but there's no rack for it, now is the time to have a wooden one made. A rack allows the water to circulate freely around the jar. Much more even heat is given the jar by using a rack than using cloths or newspapers under jars when boiling in the boiling water canner.

There are small pieces of equipment that make canning easier, such as tongs, jar lifters, and jar fillers.

When cutting cookies for baking, arrange them on pieces of waxed paper, cut the exact size of the baking sheet. Then as each batch of cookies is baked and taken from the oven, it can be removed, paper and all, from the cookie sheet. Just as simply can the next batch be placed on the sheet. This procedure saves time, and also makes it unnecessary to grease the baking sheet.

To keep lemons from wilting and shrinking, it is a good idea to store them in a cover jar in the refrigerator.
