Art Museum Curator Heard by Club Group

Charles W. Stanford, Curator of Education, North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh, delighted his audience when he spoke at a tea given by the Woman's Literary Club Tuesday afternoon, February 18, in the Parish House of St. Stephens Episcopal Church.

Mrs. E. G. Peoples, president of the club, welcomed the guests and introduced her daughter, Mrs. J. C. B. Ehringhaus Jr., executive secretary of the Museum, who in turn introduced Mr. Stanford.

Mr. Stanford spoke of the schools, movements and influences in art as he showed color slides of thirty-three selected pictures of the art treasures in the North Carolina Museum. He selected pictures from the English, French, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, German and Italian Schools, and ended with a "flash" of the abstract Impressionist. The subjects ranged from pictures of elegant ladies and gentlemen of state and royalty to scenes of a breakfast table, and depicting history, customs and manners against a background of interiors and landscapes. As he led his audience in minute observation and pointed out surprising harmonies, brush strokes and lines, everyone was enchanted with color, lights and shades and taken afar from the everyday world into a rarefied atmosphere. Mr. Stanford has the talent of making you communicate with the artist.

Mr. Stanford interspersed his lecture with many interesting facts about the museum of which every North Carolinian should be proud. Although the museum is only seven years old, it ranks fifteenth in the United States. He showed pictures from the two million dollar gift collection from the Kress Foundation, stating that the North Carolina collection was the largest of the Foundation's Regional gifts. He also told us that 36,000 school children took guided tours of the gallery in 1962.

Mr. Stanford is a native of Durham and a graduate of the University of North Carolina, and did graduate study at Columbia University, New York, and Princeton University. He has done extensive research and travel and is the author of several articles, pamphlets and other writings. Before joining the N. C. Museum, he was on the curatorial staff at Colonial Williamsburg, assisting in cataloging the objects displayed in the restoration buildings. A major part of his work at the N. C. Museum has been the implementation of a program involving the public schools in which he lectures, prepares and sends out information materials and in other ways contributes to public school education. —Reported.

Disability from heart and blood vessel diseases costs the American economy about $5 billion a year, not counting the human and economic loss from death of about one million persons annually from this cause, says the North Carolina Heart Association.
