MRS. THOMAS R. MARSHALL

Wife of the Democratic Vice-Presidential Nominee. Honorary Vice-President Woman's National Democratic League.

Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the vice-presidential nominee of the Democratic party, is a keen student of affairs and as the constant companion of her husband has had an exceptional opportunity of specializing on human nature. A very practical and far-reaching result of this peculiar interest in the larger family of the state—she has no children of her own—is found in the long list of humanitarian bills passed by the Indiana legislature during her husband's regime as governor. A bill to curtail child labor heads the list, which numbers twenty, and includes almost every legal correction for the immediate relief of labor, especially for that pertaining to women and children.

The Marshall home, like that of the Wilsons', is a home of books, and yet one does not feel "bookish" within its walls. On the contrary, one feels very much at home there the moment Mrs. Marshall appears upon the scene, and, if possible, more so when Mr. Marshall comes in.

They are such chums, this "tender-hearted" governor and his wife, and where one is the other is pretty sure to be found. They have traveled all over the country together, and if the Woman's National Democratic League has anything to do with it they will soon be going to Washington together.

Mrs. Marshall is honorary vice-president of the league and keenly interested in its work, not because it is part of the campaign, but because she recognizes the permanency of the movement to educate women in the principles of Democracy.

The Rambler in Rockingham.

The Rambler spent a day in Rockingham county recently. It was his first trip and it was really an enjoyable day. The first stop was at Reidsville and here is a good town. It was a busy day. The receipts of tobacco were heavy and the market was good, and the people were happy. The merchants seemed to be enjoying their opportunity of selling their wares. The atmosphere seemed to be that of prosperity. There were considerable political gossip about. Rockingham county is in the fifth congressional district and this is the home district of Governor W. W. Kitchin.

The Rambler had an idea that Mr. Kitchin should be allowed the fifth district, but there are a lot of folks living in the counties composing it who seem to think that there is a possibility of his losing it and still other believe that even if he carries it the plurality will be much smaller than the friends of the Governor expect. The Rambler nosed about a little. He asked especially about Rockingham county and was surprised to learn that Chief Justice Clark is strong and one well-informed citizen said that he actually believed that Judge Clark would receive one-third of the vote of the county.

From Reidsville The Rambler went to Madison and en route passed through the county seat, Westworth, and inland town, but an attractive little community. The court house and jail certainly show up well and the splendid graded and macadamized road leading from Reidsville through Westworth and on towards Madison is a sign of progress and prosperity.

Madison, with a population of 1,500 located on the line of the Norfolk & Western Railway running from Roanoke, Va., to Winston-Salem, has also a branch line of the Southern Railway and has therefore splendid railway facilities. The Norfolk & Western connects at Winston-Salem Southbound and is a part of the new through freight and passenger line from the Northwest to the Southeast.

Here is a splendid farming country. Large acreage of tobacco, wheat and corn. The crops are good and the people are doing well. The day that The Rambler was in Madison the tobacco receipts were exceptionally heavy and the selling of the leaf was not finished until late in the afternoon. The price paid was good and the farmers wore that pleasant smile. The town handles about 3,000,000 pounds of tobacco each year.

Madison is a busy little place with its two big tobacco warehouses and many business establishments. It is quietly growing and without any boom. In the western edge of Rockingham county Madison draws trade from the adjoining counties and especially from Stokes. One furniture factory is running steadily and profitably and another is being erected. The supply of good timber attracts the attention of the wood workers.

Madison has good church buildings and a good graded school system and plans have been consummated for the erection of a modern and well-equipped graded school building to take the place of the present building. The Madison Herald, owned and edited by Mr. M. L. Misener, is pulling steadily for the best interests of the town.—Charlotte Chronicle.

Gov. Wilson at Home.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 20.—Gov. Woodrow Wilson, returned to his home here tonight having made his last campaign speech, he said, until Colonel Roosevelt shall have recovered.

The Governor said he had made no plans for the immediate future or the remainder of the campaign, that request for speeches were many, but he was firm in his intention of keeping off the stump while one of his opponents was incapacitated. He probably will express his views on public questions through statements and announcements.

The Governor rode home from New York with his family. They had visited friends in New York and attended the First Avenue Presbyterian church. On the train a number of people recognized the Governor. The Governor will divide most of his time in the next few days between Princeton and the state house in Trenton.

From the Madison Herald.

We regret to note that Mr. Wallace Cardwell is quite unwell with rheumatism at his home near Mavodan and hope for his speedy recovery.

Attorney C. O. McMichael spent yesterday in the city on professional business. He has been making speeches in different parts of the State for Judge Clark and is enthusiastic as to the outlook for his election. He will speak in Greensboro Monday night.

The Stokes county commissioners have appropriated $250 for the eradication of hookworm disease in the county and $300 for the promotion of cooperative demonstration farming. Five hookworm stations will be established in the county as follows: Danbury, Walnut Cove, Prestonville Mt. Olive and Brown Mountain.

Last Sunday was a high day in Madison with the Methodists. Their beautiful new church which was built three years ago was dedicated at the 11 o'clock service. One pleasing feature of the occasion was the fact that the church was paid for. Much credit is due to Rev. A. R. Surratt, the pastor of the church, in raising the $1,236.75 necessary to pay the church out of debt. Another pleasing feature was the presence of Rev. B. Margeson who was the pastor when the house was built and took an active part in raising the funds required to build it. The church is an elegant house a credit to the town. Rev. B. Margeson preached the sermon and conducted the dedicatory services, assisted by Rev. A. R. Surratt, pastor of the church. The sermons of Rev. B. Margeson were highly complimented by his many friends. Mrs. Margeson was also present, and much regret was felt over the fact that they are going to transfer to the Arkansas conference in a few weeks' time.

The following invitations have been received by friends in Madison: "Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Franklin Rankin invite you to be present at the marriage of their daughter Mary Cline to Mr. Jacob Benjamin Baisley on Wednesday evening the thirtieth of October at half past seven o'clock at home Reidsville, North Carolina."

Slade-Henderson.

A marriage, announcement of which will be received with surprise by their friends in the state, was solemnized here yesterday when Miss Cleve Slade became the bride of Thomas J. Henderson, both parties being from Yanceyville, Caswell county. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a small circle of friends at the home of Rev. Thomas C. Faulkner, rector of the Holy Trinity Episcopal church, he, too, being the officiating minister.

Mr. Henderson came here yesterday from Caswell with his prospective bride and informing friends here of the purpose of his mission the arrangements for its consummation were quickly made. The marriage was in no sense a run-away affair. Mr. Henderson and his bride simply finding it more convenient to come here and marry than to go through the details and ceremonies incident to a formal announcement of their engagement.

Mr. Henderson is a University of North Carolina boy and is at present editor of the Caswell Sentinel. Prior to his connection with that paper he was with Webster's Weekly. He is a young man of high qualities, a splendid gentleman and is deservedly popular among a large acquaintanceship in this section. Mrs. Henderson is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Slade, of Caswell, and is an attractive and accomplished young woman.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson left on an afternoon train for Raleigh and Eastern Carolina where they will visit before returning to their home at Yanceyville.—Greensboro Daily News, Oct. 19th.

A Vote For Wilson.

A vote for Wilson is a vote for tariff reform and progressive government.

A vote for Taft is a vote for tariff extortion and a stand pat government.

A vote for Roosevelt is a vote in the dark, no telling for what. Now is the time and Wilson is the man. If we are in earnest in our desire for a revision of the tariff and want a progressive government on economical basis, a vote for Wilson is the proper way to show it.—Salisbury Post.

GOVERNOR THOMAS R. MARSHALL

Democratic Nominee for Vice-President of the United States.

Senator Simmons at Mt. Airy.

Mount Airy, Oct. 20.—Senator Simmons spoke in Mount Airy Thursday night to a crowd that taxed the capacity of Gallaway Opera House. This being the only speech he expected to make in Surry, there were present men from all over the county to hear from the Senator himself his side of the senatorial question.

His speech was a clear, strong and interesting narration of his record in the United States Senate, especially that part of it assailed by his "adversaries and accusers." In referring to his record Mr. Simmons said: "I do not claim that during the 12 years I have been your servant in the Senate I have made no mistakes, but, taking my record there as a whole, I stand upon it, and I confidently appeal to the Democrats of North Carolina for re-election upon that record. I want it distinctly understood from one end of North Carolina to the other that I am not running for the record that I have made, but that I am running upon that record. I come not to defend it—it needs no defense or apology, but I come to protect it against the statements made about it by adversaries and accusers." Answering the charge that his Democracy was of a questionable sort, he said in a part: "I am not in the habit of classifying Democrats. As for myself, however, I am just a plain old-fashioned, hard-working, ticket voting Democrat—that and nothing more. I am not running for the Senate on promises; I am running on performance."

Referring to the charge made against him that he was out of harmony with the Baltimore Conventions platform and with Woodrow Wilson, he concluded his reply; that parts of his tariff speech, made in the Senate in 1910, had been quoted by Woodrow Wilson in his campaign speeches.

Mr. Simmons spoke for more than two hours to an unusually attentive audience and was received with great enthusiasm.

He was introduced by Mr. W. F. Carter, who, after urging the Democrats of Surry County to a more determined effort for a Democratic victory in the county as would be the result in the State and Nation, recounted a number of the achievements of the "senior Senator from North Carolina."

Mr. P. W. Glidewell Makes a Correction

The report of my speech in Lexington, N. C., by the Dispatch crediting me with a criticism of Gov. Kitchin for his appointment of Mr. S. C. Penn as a director of the North Carolina Railroad is incorrect. I have not criticized the Governor for this appointment in this campaign. I have not mentioned Mr. Penn's name in the entire campaign.

P. W. GLIDEWELL.

Greensboro Man Named to Oppose Major Stedman

The Republicans and Progressives of the Fifth North Carolina Congressional District have united upon C. W. Curry, of Greensboro, as the candidate to oppose Maj. C. M. Stedman and at separate meetings of the district committees held in Greensboro Friday Mr. Curry was endorsed. The News says that Mr. Curry is a well-known and popular citizen of Greensboro, making the race for commissioner of public safety two years ago. He is a traveling salesman and has a wide acquaintance throughout the district.

At the district convention Mr. Curry was the candidate of the Progressives and after a bolt by the Progressives over a ruling by Chairman Benbow, the convention left the matter of nominating a candidate for congress with the district committee. The Progressives, too, left it to a committee to name a congressional candidate.

Since that time it is understood both sides have made proposals with a view to uniting upon a congressional candidate, the result being the joint selection of Mr. Curry. It is said that he will begin immediately a canvass of the district, his tentative plans being to go into every county in the district between now and the day of election.—Greensboro News.

ALMOST A MIRACLE.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holslaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs, and Colds with excellent results. It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at W. S. Allen's and Brittain's Drug Stores.

Richmond Contractor Now Faces Charge of Murder.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 19.—William J. Woodson, the contractor, who had charge of the building which collapsed a few days ago, killing one man and badly injuring several others, has been charged with murder and the man arrested and bailed for trial Thursday night. Woodson assumes all responsibility for directing the removal of the supports to the "green" concrete work, which caused the accident. The supports had been in place just nine days, whereas the building code requires that they shall remain twenty-one days. The man will have to answer for the death of the man, stand a trial for damages for the accident and will be fined for violating the buildings laws.

Senator Simmons' Tariff Record.

Senator Simmons is criticized for his vote for a tariff duty on lumber, coal and iron ore, cast in 1909 when a republican protection bill was before the senate. He voted for a revenue duty on these three articles in this republican protection bill, and voted against the bill.

Mr. Simmons is falsely charged with being under the influence of the lumber interests. In the republican protection bill, making the lumbermen pay high duties on what they bought. Mr. Simmons thought that there ought also to be a duty on lumber, and voted for a revenue duty of 7 per cent on lumber.

In democratic propositions, he voted to put lumber on the free list, as the articles that they had to buy were also put on the free list or their duties greatly reduced.

On July 10th, 1911 (Congressional Record, page 2783) he voted to put lumber on the free list; on July 23, 1911 (Congressional Record, page 3172) he again voted to put lumber on the free list, and he was the senate democratic manager of that bill, and he succeeded in passing it through the senate, but the president vetoed it.

In 1909 in a republican protection bill, Mr. Simmons voted for a low revenue duty on iron ore.

In the democratic bill in May, 1912, Mr. Simmons voted for the bill carrying free iron ore; and he was the democratic manager of that bill in the senate, and he succeeded in passing it through the senate; but the president vetoed it.

Mr. Simmons is a highly protective republican bill voted for a low revenue duty on coal in 1909; at the session of 1911, Mr. Gronna a republican, moved to amend the free list bill by adding to it, and thereat "coal and coke of all kinds," so as to put coal on the free list. The motion failed yeas 24; nays 52. Among the yeas were the following democrats: Bailey, Bryan, Fletcher, Gore, Hitchcock, Johnson, Martine, O'Gorman, Owen, Pomerene and Watson.

Among the nays were: Bacon, Bankhead, Chamberlain, Clark, Davis, Foster, Johnston, Meyers, Newlands, Overman, Paynter, Shivelev, Simmons, Smith, of South Carolina; Stone, Swanson, Taylor, Thornton; 22 democrats.

Thus it appears that while only eleven democrats voted for free coal, 22, among them Simmons and Overman, voted against putting coal on the free list. Nor did the house vote to put coal on the free list.—Concord Times.

Another Misstatement Corrected.

The Progressive Farmer, owned and edited by Clarence Poe, had been placed in that now famous list of newspapers—(mostly from foreign states)—said to be opposing Simmons for the senate.

When Mr. Poe learned how the managers of Governor Kitchin were using his great paper as a bludgeon to lambast Simmons, he immediately wrote the managers of Senator Simmons as follows:

"Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 16, 1912.

"Mr. S. L. Rogers, Raleigh, N. C.

"My Dear Mr. Rogers:—If I had thought I had occasion for having the Progressive Farmer engage in a fight against Senator Simmons, I shouldn't mind you knowing it. Since The Progressive Farmer is not doing any such thing, however, it is not fair that his supporters should get the idea that it is.

"Mr. McNinch had a perfect right to quote what I said in The Progressive Farmer about the evils of a high protective tariff, but it is not fair for him to include it in a long list of papers opposing Senator Simmons, when the truth is that my paper is absolutely taking no part in the senatorial controversy.

"You may make any use of this letter you wish.

"Sincerely yours,
CLARENCE POE,
"President and Editor."
