The London Lancet says that the weakness and fatigue of which to so many women complain as a result of walking is only the "natural exhaustion from carrying a burden of clothes that few strong men would care to bear. Not only are the ordinary movements of the legs and arms injuriously impended, but the waist is incircled as with a belt or hoop, to wheh a load heavierthan a felon's chain is attached." Everybody knows how true this is Women themselves do not contras diet it, but with a coura spitiful to se, they carry the burded until absolutely disabled by sickness, even then preferring to resort to doctors and tonics rather than to abandon the 'stylish heavy garments which they know to be so injurious. It is the old story-"you pay your money and you take your choice.' The freedom to choose that which is hartful involves the penalty of suffering,-the price paid for knowledge, and the opposite privilege bring its equally inevitable consequences of bealth, happiness and peace. - Laws of Life.
