WASHOUTS ON SOUTHERN. Freight Train Goes Into One at Gastonia—There Were Others.

There was a washout on the Southern at Gastonia Friday night and as a result traffic was somewhat delayed Saturday. No. 36, the north bound fast mail, was several hours late.

No. 74, fast freight coming north went into the washout, about thirteen cars going down.

We learn that a white tramp on the train was hurt but no one killed.

The second section of the Southern's fast freight train, No. 73, on its way south ran into a washout at a branch two miles from Concord early yesterday morning. The engine and two cars cleared the washout, when the track swayed down, breaking the coupling between the second and third cars from the engine and dividing the train into two parts. As the colored fireman felt the track giving away, he jumped from the engine, and escaped unhurt. The engineer held on to the throttle and was knocked against the side of his cab, sustaining slight bruises about the head.

Neither the engine nor the cars composing the train went down. This morning's Charlotte Observer says the injury to the track proved, upon examination, to be such that it could be easily and quickly repaired and the cars all put back on the track in running condition. So the wrecking train, which was making its way from Gastonia, was telegraphed for, and started immediately to the scene of the trouble.

The wrecking train proceeded cautiously from Charlotte toward Concord and met with no serious obstruction until it reached a long fill near Coddle Creek, about three miles south of Concord, and one mile from the washout mentioned above when another washout was discovered which proved to be about 80 feet long and 60 feet deep. Rocks weighing more than a ton were carried down the ravine some 200 yards. This washout, being much more serious than the one nearer Concord, was set to work on first.

As a result of these washouts, all passenger trains over the Southern, both from the North and the South, have been running by way of Statesville since yesterday morning. An extra passenger and mail train was operated between Salisbury and Concord yesterday and today.

It was thought that the track would be repaired so trains could be running between Salisbury and Charlotte this afternoon.

Resolved, first, That the Democrats of Rowan, in convention assembled, re-affirm their allegiance to the established and immortal principles of the grand old Democratic party.

"Resolved, second, That in order to insure the triumph of these glorious principles, we do, collectively and individually, pledge our most earnest and active support to the nominees of this convention, and also to the talented, polished, and brilliant nominee of our Democratic congressional convention, the Hon. Theo. F. Kluttz, who will add honor and dignity to the high office of Representative of the seventh once again. We also pledge our support to the Democratic State nominees—our reward in their election being a redeemed State and white supremacy."
