WORK AT SUMMER SCHOOL.

The Various Branches That are Being Studied.

At the summer school Saturday afternoon a lesson on phonics was given first.

"The child should first be taught to articulate well. There is no better way than by teaching phonics. 92 per cent of the words of the first readers are regular. Would it be wise to adopt the word method when only 8 per cent of the words are irregular?"

The fourth grade room contained 35 pupils. The pupils read the story of the book and then the teacher asked the pupils to tell the story.

The lesson in arithmetic was on denominated numbers. The principle of adding like and subtracting like numbers was kept prominently to the front.

"The difference between solving by denominated numbers and simple numbers is that you run by the table and not by the scale of tens as in simple numbers. No use to teach all the tables in an arithmetic."

Among the visitors today are Dr. Griffith and Mrs. A. H. Boyden. The story of Jamestown Colony was continued, beginning 1619. About 40 teachers are in attendance today, some new ones.

TWO TRAMPS KILLED.

A FATAL COLLISION ON SOUTHERN NEAR DANVILLE.

A Conflict Between Engineer and Conductor as to Cause of Wreck. No Trainmen Killed.

A wreck occurred on the main line of the Southern yesterday that cost two tramps their lives. All the southbound trains were delayed by the wreck. No. 37 did not arrive in Salisbury until 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. A press dispatch from Danville gives the following account of the wreck:

A wreck occurred on the Southern Railway, just beyond Wall Creek, at 6:30 this morning, caused by a local north-bound passenger train colliding with a south-bound freight train. Two men were killed outright and several others seriously wounded. The two engines and several cars were demolished, the debris being strewn for some distance down the track. A special relief train was hurried to the scene with physicians, the injured being brought to this city and placed in a hospital. The dead are Jerome Carter, of Augusta, and a man supposed to be a former employe of the cotton mills, whose name has not been ascertained. The body was mutilated almost beyond recognition. The engineers, firemen and postal clerks jumped and all of them were more or less bruised.

By noon the track was sufficiently cleared to allow trains to pass. Bernard Carter, John and Oscar Skinner, of Lynchburg, were painfully hurt. None of the passengers were among the seriously injured. Among those taken to the hospital were Conductor Eryl, of the freight train, Fireman Robin Robinson, colored, and a member of the crew, a free lance engineer, of Lynchburg.

A Danville special to the Charlotte Observer says: Engineer Byerly, on the Southern Railway freight train No. 71, forgot his orders and while going at the rate of 40 miles an hour, met passenger train No. 12, near Cheatman, Va. No. 12 had succeeded in almost stopping when No. 71 crashed into her. Both engines jumped, the engineer of the passenger train being slightly hurt, while Byerly and his fireman, a negro, were very seriously injured, the fireman probably fatally. No passengers were seriously injured. Six tramps, young boys, who had got in an empty box car at Lynchburg, all beating their way to Danville, were the only ones fatally hurt. They were probably asleep. A car of iron crashed clear through their box car, killing two outright, and the other three are not fatally hurt.

Engineer Byerly claims that the trouble with the freight was that the steam or air brakes would not work. This is denied by the conductor of the freight, it is said, who says that Byerly lost his head when he saw No. 12 approaching and did not know what he was doing. That is what is reported direct from the wreck by intelligent and reliable witnesses.

A car load of concentrate weighing 40,000 pounds was shipped today by the Gold Hill Copper Co., the first shipment of consequence from this mine since it passed into the hands of the present company. The water has been pumped out to the 600 foot level and one of an excellent grade is being taken out. All the stamp mills are being operated day and night and are working to the perfect satisfaction of the management. An electric light plant has been installed and every department will in the future be lighted by electricity.
