JUSTICE TO ALL.

MR. EDITOR: Please accept my thanks for your kind and complimentary notice, in your issue of yesterday, of the rendition of the operette presented at the opera house Monday evening. Permit me to say, however, that "the combined winsomeness of the tiny ones," (which was, indeed, most charming) led you into the unintentional error of saying: "In the main those participating were of the Kindergarten department." Justice to all seems to require the statement that the larger members of participants and the leading characters were Miss Minnie Stallings' music pupils, and the larger girls of the school. Respectfully,
J. N. STALLINGS.

A GAMBLING TRICK.

AN OLD DIVE IS TORN AWAY.

How Confederates Succeeded in Fleecing Their Customers.

An old house in the rear of Meroney's opera house that has a history was torn away yesterday. Thirty years ago this house was the paradise of gamblers. They came to Salisbury from towns within a radius of 200 miles and in one close room played cards for weeks on a stretch. The most popular game was a $5 limit and poker was played with a vengeance in those days. Banks were provided in an adjoining room for exasperated players and meals were brought to the room regularly.

But one day the game came to an abrupt end. The banker (who was a half partner in the business) played almost continuously and had remarkable luck. In fact he never failed to scoop in every pot in which he played. No one suspected him at first of trickery but his phenomenal and unbroken run of luck finally aroused some suspicion among the other players. A quiet investigation followed and the storm broke. It was discovered that between the ceiling and the roof a revolving table had been arranged and the other partner of the house occupied this table lying face forward upon it. Through the ceiling numerous holes had been bored and the hands of the players were plainly visible. From this garret a wire was arranged which ran between the ceiling to the ground and then to the floor. At both ends was arranged a button, one conveniently at hand for the individual on the wheel and the other under the foot of the banker—player. By system of signals understood between them the player would know the strength of any hand around the table and as a matter of course, possessed every possible advantage in his play. By this trick he fairly coined money but when the fraud was discovered the game was broken up and the house deserted.

Col. Frank Cox, of Asheville, one of the State's wealthiest and most widely known citizens and proprietor of the famous Battery Park Hotel at that place, was found dead at his home on Green River, at nine o'clock yesterday morning.

He was in excellent health Sunday night. Sunday night he was very cheerful and spent a pleasant evening with his family a number of friends, and for an hour or more he entertained them to some of the sweetest music that they had ever heard him play on his violin. At eleven o'clock he retired. At seven o'clock his old colored servant came in to build him a fire. The Colonel told the man he was feeling fine. The servant left the room and when he returned at nine o'clock, Colonel Cox was dead. Dr. J. H. Johnston said death caused from cerebral stroke, and that the colonel was seized with the attack and died about eight o'clock.

Colonel Cox was a man of fine sense of humor. He was on several occasions offered the nomination for Congress in his district, but refused. With his money he was always liberal and has in many instances helped the poor to a great extent.

Colonel Cox was born and reared in Rutherfordton. He was 63 years old. A wife and four children survive him.

Colonel Cox's estate is estimated at seven million. He was the first president of the Commercial Bank of Charlotte, where he once lived. He went to Philadelphia about twenty years ago and has spent the greatest part of his life there and at Asheville, where he was a large property holder.

Winston, N. C., June 2.—A negro about 30 years old, whose name is not known, this morning attempted to commit a criminal assault upon Miss Claude Pegram, daughter of a farmer residing two miles northwest of the city. Miss Pegram was at the spring washing some clothes when the negro came up and asked her to get him some water. She told him to go away, saying she would call her father if he did not leave. "I don't want your father; I want you," said the man, who knocked Miss Pegram down, drew his knife and told her he would cut her throat from ear to ear if she made any noise. Miss Pegram screamed and the girl's father and sister ran to her aid. As soon as the negro heard them coming he fled.

A Railroad Bridge With 17 Engines on It Goes Down Today.

Kansas City, Mo., June 3.—It is reported here today that the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy train loaded with passengers from Chicago to Kansas City and due here at 4 o'clock Sunday, is lost. All efforts to get trace of it so far have failed. The railroad don't deem it possible that the train has fallen into the flood, still the occurrence is considered extraordinary and men have been started on horseback to Liberty with orders to keep as close track as possible and carefully investigate the great washout two miles east of Birmingham. It was reported early today that the new steel bridge of the Missouri Pacific, the only one remaining in this city has gone down. Nothing definite is obtainable.

The bridge went down with a crash that could be heard above the roar of the flood but no lives were lost, as the police had kept the bridge clear in anticipation of the catastrophe. As a precaution seventeen fourteen ton locomotives were run on it and left standing at anchor. Despite this mass the fierce current washed away the masonry and the entire span was swept into the flood.
