The Producers of Wealth

The labor of the United States and all other countries of the world, for that matter, produce the wealth of the world. Even the precious metals and gems, iron, coal and other commodities stored in the bowels of the earth have to be brought forth by labor. The world is waking up to the importance of labor, and all must acknowledge not only the usefulness but the honor of labor. Labor organizations are doing a tremendous work in dignifying labor, and while many things done in furthering the purposes and ends of some of the organizations cannot be approved by even the workingmen themselves, the tendency is for good - the protection of the interests of the workingman and the uplifting of his condition and ennobling of his family.

We were gratified on Labor Day to hear the Hon. R. B Glenn, the Democratic nominee for governor of North Carolina, pay an eloquent NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET, tribute to labor and commend the sound, and we put him down as a of the people. Demagoguery was far from Glenn and he spoke earnestly and with wisdom. Labor is to stand for its own interests. When a clash comes between those interests and the interests of others, organized labor is better able to look out for itself and at the same time not willingly injure the interests of others.
