THERE is a store up in Greensboro whose every girl clerk gets married soon after accepting a position there. Six of them have caught husbands within a relatively short time. In the interests of public safety there ought to be danger signals displayed in front of the plant and a trusty watchman stationed there to flag the unwary before it is too late.

APROPOS of the query "What is the shape of a kiss," inoffending innocents are being asked to take the letters composing the word "enough" and make two words which are not enough. And when they give up, they are told that the answer is "one hug." And then it's up to the man.

IF all reports about the visions of feminine loveliness that are to dazzle our eyes on Sunday are any where near true, the only prudent course for an unmarried man is to take to the woods early in the day and not come back till midnight.

AFTER all, why should there be surprise that there were some cat-calls at the election of the President General of the Daughters of the American Revolution? There had been a plentiful showing of sharpened claws.

EVEN if there are going to be lots of disfranchised voters in Salisbury, it's hard to see where it will make any difference at the polls.

THE PRESIDENT has at last killed a bear. Those of us, however, who are not such good sportsmen will have to bear up.

HAPPENINGS IN THE STATE

The proposed dispensary was defeated at Durham yesterday by a majority of forty-one votes.

There was intense interest in the election throughout the day, but everything passed off quietly.

The Anti-Saloon League met Wednesday night and was opened with prayer by Dr. Harrell. Rev. R. C. Beaman, of Durham, was introduced to a large audience by Mr. E. G. Davis. Dr. Beaman made a powerful speech before the league in favor of prohibition, winning many votes.

For two years or more Guilford College has been raising an endowment fund with gratifying success. Now comes the announcement that Andrew Carnegie has offered $45,000 on condition that friends of the college will duplicate that sum. This liberal donation was granted in response to the application of the trustees of the college through President Hobbs and Mr. J. Elwood Cook. Supporting these gentlemen and the application were Carl Schurz, Vice-President Fairbanks, Speaker Cannon, President Charles D. McIver, President Sharpless, Colonel Sam Hill, of Washington, Congressman Dixon, of Montana, and other prominent friends of the institution. In a few hours after Mr. Carnegie's offer had become known, several thousand dollars additional was pledged by private subscriptions, and friends of the college are confident that it will comply with the conditions. When this $90,000 is secured, with the fund already subscribed, this splendid old North Carolina Educational institution will have an endowment fund of $150,000 fully guaranteed.

Yesterday's primary at Raleigh was remarkable chiefly in that it demonstrated the worth of the "Australian ballot." Raleigh was delighted with the innovation. All day yesterday, its advantages furnished the topic of favorable conversation by pleased voters.

"The vote was cast without a ripple. The workers were on hand but they found little to do. The voters seemed to appreciate the novelty of voting in private without the curious heelers' eyes over his shoulder and, for the most part, they kept to themselves the details of their ballots. The workers had an air of not knowing where to begin. They set about twiddling their thumbs and engaged for the most part in idle speculation. The reason was obvious and that was the new ballot. The certain element of the voters is not swayed to any extent by the workers and it was known how most if these would vote. The uncertain element; on the other hand had as usual been prodigal with promises and there was absolutely no way to ascertain how the voter of this sort really did vote, unless one took his word which was at the least an uncertain element.

As a general rule the ballot was cast as it was intended should be, secretly except as it was voluntarily divulged by the voter. Of course the workers at the various polls did something and in one way or another influenced a few votes. The point that was most gratifying established was that it was next to impossible for any voter to be intimidated or embarrassed in the casting of his ballot. Booths were provided in which the voter, who entered the enclosure by himself had the utmost privacy. No tickets were on the outside of the polls and could be obtained only from the pollholders and them only one at a time by the individual voter. The workers were worried and the game was played with less exactness than has ever been known there before. In only one or two instances was there an evasion of the intent of the secrecy if the ballot and the devices used were too intricate for general practice.

INCITED MUTINY.

An English Admiral Once Did This by Royal Command.

Not only did an English admiral once receive instructions to incite his men to mutiny, but he actually carried his instructions out.

On the eve of the death of James I. and as a result of Prince Charles' marriage to Henrietta Maria, Buckingham agreed to lend the Vanguard and seven merchantmen to the French. Before his promise was fulfilled the Huguenot rebellion at Rochelle broke out, and by the time Sir John Pennington, who had been put in command, was ready to sail the authorities in England became disagreeably aware that their ships would be used against the French Protestants.

Buckingham was conscious of the storm of indignation this would arouse in England. In his perplexity the only solution that occurred to him was to instruct Pennington to get his men to mutiny. A secret message to this effect was sent him through the Earl of Pembroke, and Sir John, who had no wish to hand the ships over to the French, obeyed and allowed his crew to carry him and his officers back to England.

NATURE STUDY.

Earthworms and Legume Rootlets Mellow the Soil.

The burrowing habits of the earthworm and the penetrating character of the roots of legumes exhibit a beautiful harmony of method and a striking example of effective co-operation between two ameliorating agents. An effort was made by a scientist to trace the roots of hairy vetch to their lowest extremities.

The soil was a tough sample of yellowish clay. It was astonishing to observe how in this hard clay vetch rootlets were found traveling downward in the burrows or tunnels of earthworms, occasionally throwing out laterals at a depth of fully four feet below the surface. It was curious also to note that when a small and stringy rootlet found its way into a worm burrow it suddenly developed and became clothed with a great mass of root hairs, a miniature illustration of the action of the tree root which effects an entrance into the tile drain. It may be that available plant food is found in comparative abundance on the somewhat slimy walls of the tunnel. It is difficult to estimate the benefit to the physical properties of the soil of this co-operation between plant and animal. Certainly porosity and humus are much increased.

Children, Weeds, Cows and Hens.

A Tennessee woman says in an exchange: The children are given ground and seeds and are encouraged to watch things grow. They can be of help in pulling weeds good for pigs and cows. Purslane is the only weed I let grow in my garden, for the only "good weed is a dead weed," but I always like to pull big bunches of purslane for my cows and chickens, both of which like it. As the cow, the hens and the garden are three money makers each should have the other.

A woman would almost rather write a letter than a man would rather have somebody write him a check.

The Farmer and the Boy

(Minneapolis Journal.)
A number of farmers are looking for boys. This is about the time of the year when farmers become inordinately fond of boys. But in the winter, when the boy's appetite increases in the inverse ratio of his usefulness the farmer man finds his seething love for boys cooling on his hands. Boys, if you are going to intrust yourselves to farmers, have a twelve months' contract.
