_ፙፙፙኇፙፙፙፙኇፙኇኇፙፙ the Gentleman From Indiana By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Copyright, 1899, by Doubleday & McClure Co. Copyright, 1902, by McClure, Phillips & Co.

[CONTINUED.]

"Jump fer the shadder, Mr. Hark less!" he shouted. "He's in them elders. Fer God's sake, come back!" Empty handed as he was, the editor dashed, for the treacherous elder bush as fast as his long legs could carry him, but before he had taken six strides a hand clutched his sleeve and a girl's voice quavered from close behind him: "Don't run' like that, Mr. Harkless! I can't keep up."

He wheeled about and confronted a feet high, a flushed and lovely face, hair and draperies disarranged and flying. He stamped his foot with rage. "Get back in the house!" he cried. "You mustn't go!" she panted. "It's the only way to stop you." "Go back to the house!" he shouted savagely.

"Will you come?"

"Fer God's sake," cried William Todd, "come back! Keep out of the road He was emptying his revolver at the clump of bushes, the uproar of his firing blasting the night. Some one screamed from the house: "Helen, Helen!"

John seized the girl's wrists. Her gray eyes flashed into his defiantly. "Will you go?" he roared.

"No!"

but he' says the others was at awhat 'd he call it?"

"'A merely complimentary range," Briscoe supplied. He handed William a cigar and bit the end off another himself. "Minnie, you better go in the house and read, I expect, unless you want to go down to the creek and join those felks." "Me!" she exclaimed. "I know when to stay away. I guess. Do go and put that terrible gun up." "No," said Briscoe lighting his cigar deliherately. "It's all safe; there's no question of that; but maybe William and I better go out and take a smoke in the orchard as long as they stay down at the creek."

In the garden shafts of white light pierced the bordering trees and fell where June roses breathed the mild night breeze, and here, through summer spells, the editor of the Herald and the lady who had run to him at the pasture bars strolled down a path trembling with shadows to where the creek tinkled over the pebbles. They walked slowly, with an air of being well accustomed friends and comrades, and for some reason it did not strike either of them as unnatural or extraordinary. They came to a bench on the bank, and he made a great fuss dusting the seat for her with his black vision, a dainty little figure about five slouch hat. Then he regretted the hat -it was a shabby old hat of a Carlow county fashion.

It was a long bench, and he seated himself rather remotely/ toward the end opposite her, suddenly realizing that he had walked very close to her coming down the narrow garden path. Neither knew that neither had spoken since they left the veranda, and it had taken them a long time to come through the little orchard and the garden. She rested her chin on her hand, leaning forward and looking steadily at the creek. Her laughter had quite gone; her attitude seemed a little wistful and a little sad. He noted that her hair curled over her brow in a way he had not pictured in the lady of his dreams. This was so much prettier. He did not care for tall girls. He had not cared for them for almost half an hour. It was so much more beautiful to be dainty and small and piquant. in a way that would have put a furnace to shame, but he turned his eyes from her because he feared that if he looked longer he might blurt out some speech about her loveliness. His

of running all the way home." "Ah!" she cried indignantly. "They told me you always answered like this." "Well, you see, the Crossroads efforts have proved so thoroughly hygienic for me. As a patriot I have sometimes felt extreme mortification that such bad marksmanship should exist in the county, but I console myself with the thought that their best shots are, unhappily, in the penitentiary."

"There are many left. Can't you understand that they will organize again and come in a body, as they did before you broke them up? And then, if they come on a night when they know you are wandering out of town"-

"You have not had the advantage of an intimate study of the most exclusive people of the Crossroads, Miss Sherwood. There are about thirty gentlemen who remain in that neighborhood while their relatives sojourn under discipline. If you had the entree over there, you would understand that these thirty could not gather themselves into a company and march the seven miles without physical debate in the ranks. They are not precisely amiable people. even among themselves. They would quarrel and shoot one another to pieces long before they got here."

"But they worked in a company once.'

all dead."

She struck the bench again. "Oh, you laugh at me! You make a joke of your You won't despise me for being mawkown life and death and laugh at every- ish tonight?" he asked. "I haven't had thing. Have five years of Plattville the chance for so long.' taught you to do that?"

"I laugh only at taking the poor and the balm of the little breezes that Crossroaders too seriously, I don't laugh stirred the foliage around them was at your running into fire to help a fel- the smell of damask roses from the low mortal."

"I knew there wasn't any risk. I pebbles at their feet, and a drowsy knew he had to stop to load before he bird, half wakened by the moon, croonshot again."

"He did shoot again. If I had known girl looked out at the sparkling water you before tonight, I"- His tone through downcast lashes. "Is it bechanged, and he spoke gravely. "I am cause it is so transient that beauty is at your feet in worship of your divine pathetic," she said, "because we can philanthropy. It's so much finer to risk never come back to it in quite the with-with"-

"No." she interrputed. "I meant dear and good to me. I think he was thinking of me. It was for my sake he wanted us to meet."

It might have been hard to convince a woman if she had overheard .this speech that Miss Sherwood's humility was not the calculated affectation of a coquette. Sometimes a man's unsuspicion is wiser, and Harkless knew that she was not flirting with him. In addition, he was not a fatuous man; he did not extend the implication of her words nearly so far as she would have had him.

"But I had met you," said he, "long ago."

"What." she cried, and her eyes danced. "You actually remember?" "Yes. Do you?" he answered. "I stood in Jones' field and heard you singing, and I remembered. It was a long time since I had heard you sing:

"I was a ruffler of Flanders And fought for a florin's hire. You were the dame of my captain And sang to my heart's desire.

"But that is the balladist's notion. The truth is that you were a lady at the court of Clovis, and I was a heathen captive. I heard you sing a Christian hymn and asked for baptism."

She did not seem overpleased with "Never for seven miles. Four miles his fancy, for, the surprise fading from was their radius. Five would see them her face, "Oh, that was the way you remembered," she said.

"Perhaps it was not that way alone.

The night air wrapped them warmly, garden. The creek splashed over the ed languorously in the sycamores. The "You'll come in the morning?".

"Good night, Miss Sherwood," he returned hilariously. "It has been such a pleasure to meet you. Thank you so much for saving my life. It was very good of you, indeed. Yes; in the morning. Good night, good night." He shook hands with all of them, including Mr. Todd, who was going with him. He laughed all the way home, and William walked at his side in amazement. The Herald building was a decrepit frame structure on Main street. It had once been a small warehouse and was now sadly in need of paint. Closely adjoining it, in a large, blank looking yard, stood a low brick cottage, over which the second story of the old warehouse leaned in an effect of tipsy affection that had reminded Harkless, when he first saw it, of an old Sunday school book woodcut of an inebriated parent under convoy of a devoted child. The title to these two buildings and the blank yard had been included in the purchase of the Herald, and the cottage was the editor's home.

There was a light burning upstail in the Herald office. From the stree a broad, tumbledown stairway ran u on the outside of the building to th second floor, and at the stairway rail ing John turned and shook his companion warmly by the hand.

"Good night, William," he said. "It was plucky of you to join in that muss tonight. I shan't forget it."

"I jest happened to come along," replied the other awkwardly. Then, with a portentous yawn, he asked, "Ain't ye goin' to bed?"

"No; Parker wouldn't allow it." "Well," observed William, with another yawn, which threatened to ex- of profanity as futile as his cart. pose the veritable soul of him," "I d'know how ye stand it. It's closte on 11 o'clock. Good night.".

John went up the steps, singing aloud-

"For tonight we'll merry, merry be, For tonight we'll merry, merry be," and stopped on the sagging platform at the top of the stairs and gave the moon good night with a wave of the same way? I am a sentimental girl. hand and friendly laughter. At this is If you are born so it is never entirely suddenly struck him that he was twenty-nine years of age and that he had laughed a great deal that evening; laughed and laughed over things not in the least humorous, like an excited schoolboy making a first formal call that he had shaken hands with Miss Briscoe when he left her as if he should never see her again; that he had taken Miss Sherwood's hand twice in one very temporary parting; that he had shaken the judge's hand five times and was turning out, and near the country people m over the county line; dust arose from every and highway and swept berald their coming. the "sprinkling contracten at work with the town and clouds

Carlow con

from far a came-nay.

thoroughfa

into town

Dibb Z

or." had

"Honey, hit baid luck sing 'fo' breakfus'."

water cart since the morning stars were bright, but he might as well have watered the streets with his tears, which, indeed, when the farmers began to come in, bringing their cyclones of dust, he drew nigh unto after a burst "Tief wie das Meer soll deine Liebe sein. hummed the editor in the cottage. His song had taken on a reflective tone, as that of one who cons a problem or musically ponders which card to play. He was kneeling before an old trunk in his bedchamber. From one compartment he took a neatly folded pair of duck trousers and a light gray tweed coat, from another a straw hat with a ribbon of bright colors. He examined these musingly. They had lain in the trunk for a long time undisturbed. He shook the coat and brushed it. Then he laid the garments upon his bed and proceeded to shave himself carefully. after which he donned the white trousers, the gray coat and, rummaging in the trunk again, found a gay pink cravat, which he fastened about his tall collar (also a resurrection from the trunk) with a pearl pin. He took a long time to arrange his hair with a pair of brushes. When at last it suited him and his dressing was complete, he sallied forth to breakfast.

He dropped her wrists, caught her up in his arms as if she had been a kitten and leaped into the shadow of the trees that leaned over the road from He had no notion that he was sighing the yard. The rifle rang out again, and the little ball whistled venomously overhead. Harkless ran along the fence and turned in at the gate. A loose strand of the girl's hair blew across his cheek, and in the moon her head, shone with gold. She had light nights.

The rifle rang out again.

brown hair and gray eyes and a short upper lip like at curled rose leaf. He set her down on the veranda steps. Both of them laughed wildly.

"But you came with me," she gasped triumphantly.

"I always thought you were tall,' he answered, and there was afterward a time when he had to agree that this was a somewhat vague reply.

CHAPTER IV.

"Pooh! They're all right. That scal awag's half way to Six Crossroads by at a stone in the water before she anthis time, isn't he, William?"

swered.

your life for a stranger than for a friend."

never seen before." "Oh, no. I saw you at the lecture. I it made him tingle to his finger tips. heard you introduce the Hon. Mr. Halloway."

"Then I don't understand your wishing to save me."

She smiled unwillingly and turned her gray eyes upon him with troubled sun- sentimental about. I am like one 'who niness, and under the sweetness of her through long days of toil'-only that regard he set a watch upon his lips, doesn't quite apply-'and nights devoid though he knew it would not avail him of ease,' but I can't claim that one ably so far, he thought, but he had the specialty-like one who sentimental longings of years, starved of expression, culminating in his heart. She continued to look at him wistfully, searchingly, gently. Then her eyes trav- and to do what you have done and to eled over his big frame, from his live this isolated village life that must schoes (a patch of moonlight fell on be so desperately dry and dull for a them; they were dusty; he drew them man of your sort, and yet to have the lay content, drowsily wondering why under the bench with a shudder) to his kind of heart that makes wonderful he smiled, only knowing that there broad shoulders (he shook the stoop out melodies sing in itself-oh," she cried, of them). She stretched her small white "I say that is fine." hands toward him and looked at them in contrast and broke into the most delicious/low laughter in the world. At this he knew the watch on his lips was here because I couldn't make a living worthless. It was a question of min- anywhere else. And the 'wonderful utes till he should present himself to melodies'-I have only known you one her eyes as a sentimental and suscep- evening-and the melodies"- He rose tible imbecile. He knew it. He was in to his feet and took a few steps toward wild spirits.

"Could you realize that one of your dangers might be a shaking?" she cried. "Is your seriousness a lost art?" Her laughter ceased suddenly. "Ah, skirt and the tip of a little white, high no! I understand Thiers said the heeled slipper that peeped out from French laugh always in order not to weep. I haven't lived here five years.

"We Plattvillians own that with the and white kid slippers on moonlight best of metropolitans, and, for my part, I see more of it here. You do not appreciate us. We have large landscapes from the turf before her, twisted it in the heart of the city, and what other absently in her fingers, then turned to capital has advantages like that? Next winter the railway station is to have a new stove for the waiting room. Heaven itself is one of our suburbs-it is so close that all one has to do is to die. You insist upon my being French, you tween them, that for his life he could see, and I know you are fond of nonsense. How did you happen to put 'The Walrus and the Carpenter' at the bottom of a page of Fisbee's notes?" "Was it? How were you sure it was

"In Carlow county!"

"He might have written it himself." "Fisbee has never in his life read anything lighter than cuneiform inscriptions."

"That is a man's point of view, isn't teased out of you, is it? Besides, tonight is all a dream. It isn't real, you "You risked yours for a man you had know. You couldn't be mawkish."

Her tone was gentle as a caress, and "How do you know?" he asked. "I just know. Do you think I'm very bold and forward?" she said dreamily. "It was your song I wanted to be William's four.

"Still heard in his soul the music Of wonderful melodies."

"You do not understand," he returned sadly, wishing before her to be unmercifully just to himself. "I came take you back. Let us go before I"-He finished with a helpless laugh.

She stood by the bench, one hand resting on it. She stood all in the tremulant shadow. She moved one step toward him, and a single long sliver of light pierced the sycamores and fell upon her head. He gasped. "What was it about the melodies?"

she said. "Nothing. I don't know how to thank you for this evening that you have given me. I-I suppose you are leaving tomorrow. No one ever stays here. I"-"What about the melodies?" He gave it up. "The moon makes people insane!" he cried. "If that is true, then you need not be more afraid than I, because 'people' is plural. What were you saying about"-"I had heard them-in my heart. When I heard your voice tonight I knew that it was you who sang them there, had been singing them for me always."

"So!" she cried gayly. "All that debate about a pretty speech!" Then, sinking before him in a courtesy. "I am beholden to you." she said. "Do you think no man ever made a little flattery for me before tonight?"

"Idiot!" he cried. "What has hap pened to me?" Then he shook his fist long. He had driveled along respect- doesn't sleep well here; it is Plattville's at the moon and went in to work, he thought.

CHAPTER V.

"Yes," she answered, "to come here HE bright sun of circus day shone into Harkless' window, and he awoke to find himsel smiling. For a little while h was something new. It was thus as a boy he had wakened on birthday mornings or on Christmas or on the Fourth of July, drifting happily out of pleasant dreams into the consciousness of iong awaited delights that had come true, yet lying only half awake in a cheerful borderland, leaving happiness undefined.

The morning breeze was fluttering at the garden. "Come," he said, "let me his window blind, a honeysuckle vine tapped lightly on the pane. Birds were trilling, warbling, whistling, and from the street came the rumbling of wagons, merry cries of greeting and the barking of dogs. What was it made him feel so young and strong and light hearted? The breeze brought him the smell of June roses, fresh and sweet with dew, and then he knew why he had come smiling from his dreams. He leaped out of bed and shouted loudly: "Zen! Hello, Xenophon!"

> In answer an ancient, very black darky, his warped and wrinkled visage showing under his grizzled hair_ like charred paper in a fall of pine ashes, put his head in at the door and said: "Good mawn', suh. Yessuh. Hit's done pump' full. Good mawn', suh." A few moments later the colored man, seated on the front steps of the cottage, heard a mighty splashing within while the rafters rang with stentorian song:

"He promised to buy me a bonny blue ribben He promised to buy me a bonny blue ribbon. He promised to buy me a bonny blue ribbon.

To tie up my bonny brown hair.

Xenophon stared after him as he went out of the gate whistling heartily. The old darky lifted his hands, palms outward.

"Lan' name, who dat?" he exclaimed aloud. "Who dat in dem panjingeries? He gone jine de circus!" His hand fell upon his knees, and he got to his feet rheumatically, shaking his head with foreboding. "Honey, honey, hit baid luck, baid luck sing 'fo' breakfus'. Trouble 'fo' de day be done. Trouble, honey, great trouble. Baid luck, baid luck!"

Along the square the passing of the editor in his cool equipments was a progress, and wide were the eyes and deep the gasps of astonishment caused by his festal appearance. Mr. Tibbs and his sister rushed from the postoffice to stare after him.

"He looks just beautiful, Solomon," said Miss Tibbs.

Harkless usually ate his breakfast alone, as he was the latest riser in Plattville. There were days in the winter when he did not reach the hotel until 8 o'clock. This morning he found a bunch of white roses, still wet with dew and so fragrant that the whole room was fresh and sweet with their odor, prettily arranged in a bowl on the table, and at his plate the largest of all with a pin through the stem. He looked up smilingly and nodded at the red faced, red haired waitress who was waving a long fly brush over his head. "Thank you, Charmion," he said. "That's very pretty."

"That old Mr. Wimby was here," she answered, "and he left word for you to look out. The whole possetucky of Johnsons from the Crossroads passed his house this mornin', comin' this way, and he see Bob Skillett on the square when he got to town. . He left them flowers. Mrs. Wimby sent 'em to ye. I didn't bring 'em."

"Thank you for arranging them." . She turned even redder than she always was and answered nothing, vig-not have helped moving half way up the bench toward her. "What is it?" he asked, and he spoke in a whisper such as he might have used at the bedside of a dying friend. He would not have laughed if he had known he did so. She twisted the spear of grass into a little ball and threw it all women to wear crisp white gowns

She picked a long spear of grass him slowly. Her lips parted as if to speak. Then she turned away again.

The action was so odd, somehow, as she did it, so adorable, and the preserved silence was such a bond be-

	"He tuck up the fence like a scared rabbit," Mr. Todd responded, looking		"Miss Briscoe"- "She doesn't read Lewis Carroll, and		"Oh, dear, what can the matter be? Oh, dear, what can the matter be?	orously darting her brush at an imag- inary fly on the cloth. After several
,	into his hat to avoid meeting the eyes	The second s	it was not her hand. What made you	they could keep an unseen watch on the	Oh, dear, what can the matter be? Johnnie's so long at the fair!"	minutes she said abruptly, "You're wel-
	of the lady, "and I didn't have no call	we forget to be presented to each	write it on Fisbee's manuscript?"	garden and the bank of the creek, Judge Briscoe and Mr. Todd were ensconced		come."
1940 - 11	to foller. He knowed how to run, 1	"I beg your pardon, Miss Sherwood.	"He was here this afternoon. I	under an apple tree, the former still	mouth opened and stayed open. "Him!"	There was a silence, finally broken reckon. Time Mr. Harkless come out	In the norturbation of comedy I for-	teased him a little about your heading	armed with his shotgun. When the	he muttered faintly. "Singin'!"	by a long, gasping sigh. Astonished,
- A.	the yard again we see him take across	act "	in the Herald-'Business and the Cra-	young people got up from their bench,	"Well the old triangle knew the music	he looked at the girl. Her eyes were the road to the wedge woods, near bal!	"It mas molodrame masn't it?" she	dle, the Altar and the Grave,' isn't it?	the two men rose hastily, then saunter-	of our tread;	set unfathomably upon his pink tie.
	a mile up. Somebody else with him	said He laughed but she shook her	-and he said it had always troubled	ed slowly toward them. When they	How the peaceful Seminole would tremble in his bed!"	The wand had dropped from her nerve-then-looked like a hid Mr.	head.	him, but your predecessor had used it,	met, Harkless shook each of them cor-	sang the editor.	less hand, and she stood rapt and im-
2	across the field to join him They're	"Purest comedy." he said gayly, "ex-	and you thought it good. So do I. He	hially by the hand without seeming to	-	movable. She started violently from fur enough toward home by this."	sept your part of it. You shouldn't have	isked me if I could think of anything	now it.	"I dunno huccome it," exclaimed the	her trance. "Ain't ye goin' to finish
	"Did Miss Helen shake hands with	Sone it. This evening was not arranged	that you might like better and put in	"We were coming to look for you,"	old man, "but, bless Gawd, de young	yer coffee?" she asked, plying her in-you four or five times?" asked Briscoe.	in honor of 'visiting ladies.' But you	place of it and I wrote 'The Time Has	explained the judge. "William, was	man happy!" A thought struck him	strument again, and, bending slightly.	£ chuckling.	mustn't think me a comedian. Truly, I	Some,' because it was the only thing	afraid to go home alone-thought some	suddenly, and he scratched his head.	whispered, "Say, Eph Watts is over 291	"No. Why?" said Minnie.	didn't plan it My friend from 'Six'	I could think of that was as appropri-	one might take him for Mr. Harkless	"Maybe he goin' away," he said quer- ulously. "What become of ole Zen?"	there behind ye."
- * ²¹	"Because Harkless did. My hand	Crossroads must be given the credit of	ate and as fetching as your headlines.	and shoot him before he got into town.	The splashing ceased, but not the voice,	(TO BE CONTINUED)
	aches, and I guess William's does too	devising the scene though you divined	He was perfectly dear about it. He was so serious. He said he feared it.	Can you come out with Willetts in the	which struck into a noble marching
$1 \geq 2$	the hearly shook our arms off when we	\$4.77	wouldn't be acceptable. I didn't notice.	morning, Harkless," he went on, "and	chorus.	CACTODIA
	tord him he'd been a fool. Seemed to	"It was a little too picturesque, 1	that the paper he handed me to write	go with the young ladies to see the	"Oh, my Lawd," said the colored man,	CASTORIA
- T	to him good. I told him he ought to	think. I know about Six Crossroads.	on was part of his notes; nor did he, I	parade? And Minnie wants you to stay	"I pray you listen at dat!"	For Infants and Children.
	ane somebody to take a shot at him	Please tell me what you mean to do."	think. Afterward he put it back in his	to dinner and go to the show with them	"Soldiers marching up the street.	server and the server is the server of the server is the s every morning before breakfast-not	"Nothing. What should I?"	pocket. It wasn't a message."	in the afternoon."	They keep the time;	The Kind You Have Always Bought that it's any joking matter," the old gentleman finished thoughtfully.	"You mean that you will keep on let-	"I'm not so sure he did not notice	Harkless seized his hand and shook it	They look sublime!	0
	"I should say not " sold your	ting them shoot at you until they-until	He is very wise. Do you know, I have	and then laughed heartily as he accept-	Hear them play 'Die Wacht am Rhein.' They call it Schneider's band.	Bears the 1150-4
	"I should say not," said William, with a deep frown and a jerk of his	you"- She struck the bench angrily	the impression that the old fellow	ed the invitation.	Tra la la, la la."	Signature of Charge Hulcher.
	head toward the rear of the house.		wanted me to meet you "	At the gate Miss Sherwood extended	The length of Main street and all
	"He jokes about it enough. Wouldn't	"There's no summer theater in Six	"How dear and good of him!" She	her hand to him and said politely.		Ciple www.lle ment to ment	ļ
	even promise to carry a gun after this.	Crossroads. There's not even a church. Why shouldn't they?" he asked grave-	spoke earnestly, and her face was suf-	while mockery shone from her eyes: "Good night, Mr. Harkless. I do not	rattle of vehicles of every kind. Since	Girls usually want to marry $\mathbf{x}_{i} \in \mathbb{R}^{n}$	baid he wouldn't know how to use it_	to up to the long and todions oven.	ruben with a warm nght. There was	leave tomorrow. I am very glad to have		men who can support them in a never shot one off since he was a boy.	the the second Concerned or a	In doube about net meaning what she	met you."	to the village, a long procession, on ev-	style to which they have been 19	on the Fourth of July. This is the	the days when here and take a shot	ouru.	"We are going to keep her all sum-	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	unaccustomed.
3. 0	third time he's be'n shot at this year,	at me. It whiles away dull care for	it was, sould answered unsteadily.	mer, if we can," said Minnie, weaving	exhilaration; everybody was leader	It's and a nori - mle in him, and he has the additional exercise	the knew how great was my need of	her arm about her friend's waist.	and shouting and calling greet.u. to:
3		titut, dina se suo se suo se suo	a few minutes' commenionableness	Mar diam approx over accord, there		A Was a . sis is db. J.
			4				1