

HOW MR. BOYDEN TOOK PART IN KILLING OF CHILD LABOR BILL

Appeared before Legislative Committee and Fought measure Endorsed by Unions

The following letter is self explanatory:
Charlotte, N. C., March 8, 1905.
Mr. L. W. HESS, Chairman Legislative Committee, Central Labor Union, Salisbury, N. C.
Dear Sir:—
In answer to your question as to the attitude of Mr. A. H. Boyden toward the Child Labor Bill, before the last legislature, I have to say that he went to Raleigh to oppose the passage of the bill and that he spoke against it before the Committee on Manufactures and Labor. This is a matter of public record in the Raleigh papers giving an account of the hearing, the Post and the News and Observer of February 1.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Boyden said: "No set of men in North Carolina have done so much to refine the condition of the working men of North Carolina as the mill men—I was here two years ago and I say from a political standpoint that it is due these gentlemen who represent twenty million dollars worth of mill interest of North Carolina, that they should be allowed to remain at home and not be hurried here every year or two, when this honorable body of men meet, to prevent some radical legislation." Sincerely yours,
A. J. MCKELWAY.

GOV. GLENN PAYS $250 REWARD FOR CAPTURE OF MURDERER TOM HUNT

Raleigh, March 22—Governor Glenn today paid $250 reward for the capture of Tom Hunt, the white man charged with burglary and murder in been delivered to the sheriff of Robeson.

Raleigh, N. C., March 22—Governor Glenn has revoked a warrant he issued some days ago, honoring a requisition from Governor Montague of Virginia for Edward McKinney, now of Taylorsville, Alexander county, who is wanted in Gaston county, Virginia, on the charge of taking a watch from I. B. Bryant. There is no precedent in the history of the State for such a revocation, but the governor says the developments satisfied him that this was not a case in which such a requisition would apply, the offense, according to the evidence not seeming to be larceny at all. J. L. Gwaltney of Taylorsville, was here to appear before the governor in the interest of McKinney. And he procured an order for the release of the prisoner from custody.

The governor grants a conditional pardon for James Burdine, colored, from Henderson county, who has served 14 years of a 20 years sentence, for manslaughter. The pardon is under the act of the recent legislature, empowering the governor to issue such pardons to hold good during the good behavior of the convict. The pardon was obtained by Htn. Dan Hugh McLean on recommendation of the solicitor who prosecuted the case and many citizens.

The Supreme court hands down 18 opinions in the first two weeks, two murder cases being among them. These are State vs. Dan Teachy, from Duplin county, under sentence to be hanged for killing W. Robert Rivenbark in Duplin county, and State vs. Will Exum, under similar sentence for the murder of Guy Walston in Lenoir county. The Supreme court holds in both cases that the trials were without error and in every way fair. So that there is nothing left but for the prisoners to pay the death penalty, unless there is executive clemency, and this is not at all probable.

It is announced that J. O. Ellington, State bank examiner, under the corporation commission, will resign to become vice president and general manager of the bank of Fayetteville, which is now being organized, after its recent failure, to resume business April 10th. It is not known who will be his successor. Miller Hughes, also of Raleigh, will become cashier of the reorganized bank.

In the case of the State vs. Paul Young from Wilmington, involving the right of courts to sentence persons convicted to assault and battery to terms on the public roads, the Supreme court handed down an opinion written by Chief Justice Clarke in which that the general assembly having under the authority of the constitution, adopted work on the public roads as a part of the punishment for misdemeanors and crimes, the Supreme court has no power to declare such sentences void.

JUDGE PRITCHARD HERE

Judge Jeter C. Pritchard and wife were in the city for a short time this morning. The judge and wife took a cab and drove over part of the city, presumably to admire the beautiful streets.

WHO MAY VOTE

In order to vote at the primaries, it is necessary to have lived in the state two years, county six months, and town three months. Only men living within the corporate limits of the city of Salisbury may vote, and they must have lived within such limits for three months. The length of time a voter has lived in his ward does not matter, so that he conforms to the other qualifications.

TAR HEEL IN PHILIPPINES

David L. Ritchie of Salisbury Writes From Cavite, P. I.

The Sun has received the following letter:
Dasmariñas, Cavite, P. I.,
January 31, 1905.

Dear Mr. Editor:—
I have been taking The Salisbury Globe for one year and I am always glad to get it, I don't know what I would have done for reading matter had it not been for your paper, as reading matter is hard to get here in the Philippines. I am sorry, but I will have to ask you to discontinue the paper as I am coming home soon. If it does not take up too much space in your paper I would be glad if you would print the following piece and oblige. I live on Route No. 3, Salisbury, N. C.

Yours respectfully,
DAVID L. RITCHIE.

From a Tar Heel in the Philippines

Many a long evening have I sat in a weatherboard shack in North Carolina, where the winds were howling through a hundred different crevices, the mercury going down like canteen stock in a W. C. T. U. meeting, and read weird tales that went something like this: "The Philippines, land of sunshine and flowers, waving palms, and roaring torrents, majestic mountains and picturesquely people." These things may be all true enough and so are science novelties, but the regular soldier pays no heed to these things and although the country may be a veritable Garden of Eden, he will find something to grumble about.

Where the Poetry

I was tempted to enlist by the over-enthusiasm. I am here now and woe betide the traveler who wrote these enticing sketches should I ever meet him. I do not wish to be classed as a pessimist, but simply wish to describe things as I see them. The beautiful sunshine is a glare hotter than the hinges of Hades. The average Philippine flower would stink a hyena away from a glue factory. The waving palms are described by Mark Twain as resembling dilapidated umbrellas, and the ferns one and all have stickers that leave a wound as if a man had been stabbed with a pump handle. The majestic mountains—well just carry a medicine case hospital corps pouch, haversack, canteen, blanket, a 44 colts, and three or four days rations over one of these mountains and then try and extract any poetry from the situation. The load itself would make a Mexican burro bat his eyes. The roaring torrents are all right. I know I for I paid for a medicine case that lies at the bottom of one of them, but there are lots of people that never saw a river tilted up more than it ought to be and getting a hump on itself without roaring about it. The fruit—little dried up bananas about the size of a North Carolina peanut, and coconuts at five cents a piece. "The ten commandments of the hospital corps" are "Don't eat the fruit or you will have dysentery," and sleep under a mosquito bar and avoid fever.

The Native Philippino

Let me tell you about them as I see them. Married: Yes, the church has a full Nelson grip on them to that extent. Their clothes: Well both together they are wearing just about enough drapery to pad a crutch. Shoes they never wear, and consequently they leave a track like a half grown grizzly bear. The men wear a hat about three feet in diameter and the general effects are that of a bull calf under a shed. They are a little pinheaded insignificant looking people, with about as much expression on their face as a piece of mince pie. They are divided into tribes, one

RUSSIANS AT HAVEN OF SAFETY

Main Army Now 106 Miles North of Tieling With Japanese Slowly Pursuing

St. Petersburg, March 22—A dispatch from the front says: With the Russian army at Quntzuling, 106 miles north of Tieling, the rear guard has now occupied Sipingha, 70 miles north of Tieling. The enemy continues to follow us, but the pursuit is slow and the main Japanese army is, apparently, resting at Tieling. The four days rest at that place gave us a chance to reform the army and recover from the previous hardships. Since then our march has been conducted in an orderly manner, but so rapidly that many horses have died from exhaustion. A later dispatch says that Gen. Kurapatkin has returned from Harbin, where he went Sunday. It is officially stated that no issue has been decided upon as yet. It is said the loan will be issued as low as ninety per cent.

London, March 22—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram company says that the main Russian army has reached a place of safety, but the stragglers have been cut off by the Japanese. The haven of the Russians is not stated.

and Mister Rooster never even looked around; just kept on picking up lizards and snails. Eating one of these "War Lords" is like chewing a rubber boot, but at that it is a change and a relief. The chickens have one redeeming feature, they are handsome along athletic lines, but the hogs are a disgrace to the savages that own them. I have seen the "Georgia razor backs," but they are models of beauty, veritable swine Apollos in comparison with these wrecks. They are two thirds nose, and their eyes resemble beads stuck in cucumbers. But their intelligence is something wonderful, so much so that I never order pork chops in a Philippine restaurant.

Mosquitoes and Mosquito Bar

As to mosquito bars and malaria, we are impressedly told that every time a mosquito jabs a hole in one of us, he either introduces a large dose of malaria, or presents us with a large unknown quantity scientifically called "Elephantiasis." Now we don't properly know what Elephantiasis means, but it suggests a horrible nightmare of trunks, tusks and hind legs bent forward, so the mosquito bar is indispensable, you can follow our trail by cast off rifle belts, canteens and emergency rations, but never by a mosquito bar. Malaria and dysentery are not the only bugaboos, with the cool weather comes the smallpox. Vaccination protects the most of us but occasionally it don't protect, and one more man is missing at muster, once more the trumpeter is called upon to blow taps, the American public the censor of our motives says: "Well he knew the risk when he enlisted, and he probably joined the army because he was a failure at everything else." Dear American public, don't throw all the bouquets to the volunteers; give us some credit.

Beautiful Window

Window Display at Ladies' Bazaar a Thing of Beauty

One of the most attractive display windows ever seen in Salisbury is that of Mrs. Fink, who has her millinery opening today. The profusion of colors are blended so nicely with the beautiful fowers and lovely hat creations that it makes a sight pleasing to the eye of humanity. The reporter was shown through the millinery department this morning and while not authority on anything relating to the fair sex, is satisfied that a prettier array of ladies' hats will not be shown in Salisbury this spring.

Women mostly think about their children and men about themselves.

STANFORD'S WIDOW NOT POISONED

Police Say Her Death Was Due to Natural Causes

(Special to The Sun)
San Francisco, March 22—After a full police examination into the evidence surrounding the death of Mrs. Leland Stanford, the noted woman philanthropist, it was announced late last night that her death was due to natural causes. While confessing inability to explain the presence of the strychnine in the carbonate of soda which she drank before her death, they say it was not sufficient in quantity to cause death.

GASKILL RALLY TOMORROW NIGHT

There will be a meeting of the Gaskill clans tomorrow night at the Opera house at 8 o'clock, to further the interests of this gentleman in his mayoralty candidacy.

Gaskill adherents are looking for a much larger and more enthusiastic meeting even than the one held last Thursday night at the Court House, which fanned the sparks of discontent with the present administration into flames of determination to put in a man of the people, for the people and with the people.

That this determination is to be realized is not doubted for a minute by the Gaskill men, who claim to know what the result of the primary will be.

The men who are supporting Mr. Gaskill represent every station in life from the workman to the capitalist, and it is the sincere wish of his friends that he be elected.

It is not necessary to go into details again as to the life and character of this gentleman, for all men of Salisbury know Dave Gaskill and his friends trust him implicitly in all things.

BANQUET TONIGHT

Fairbanks and Party to be Banqueted at Greensboro

The Tar Heel club of Greensboro will give a banquet tonight to Vice President Fairbanks and party.

Several Salisbury republicans left for that city this morning and will be present at the banquet.

This will be one of the greatest things of its kind ever given in this state.

MRS. CHADWICK'S CASE

Cleveland, Ohio, March 22—According to an agreement entered into between Mrs. Chadwick's attorneys and the United States district attorney, the motion for a new trial will be argued Monday. Should another trial be denied, she will most likely be sentenced on that day.

LAWYER ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

New York, March 22—Charles Erd, a wealthy lawyer of St. Louis, attempted suicide by shooting himself in the Imperial hotel this morning. While he has a chance for recovery, he will be blind for life should he survive, the bullet having affected his optic nerve.
