Breaking Balky Horses.

A correspondent of the Allentown (Pa.) News, D. N. Kern, of Shimmersville, writes: Some time ago while driving through Lehigh county, I met a man who had a very balky horse. I have been so lucky that I have never had a balky horse, but if I had one I would know half a dozen ways how to start him.

First—Pat the horse on the neck, examine him carefully, first one side, then the other; if you can get a handful of grass give it to him. Then jump into the wagon and give the word go and he will generally obey.

Second—Taking the horse out of the shafts and turning him around until he is giddy will generally start him.

Third—Another way to cure a balky horse is, place your hand over his nose and shut off his wind until he wants to go.

Fourth—Then, again, take a couple of turns of stout twine around the fore legs just below the knee, just tight enough for the horse to feel it; tie in a bow knot; at the first click he will probably go dancing off. After going a short distance you can get out and remove the string, to prevent injury to the tendons.

Fifth—Again you can try the following: Take the tail of the horse between the hind legs, and tie it by a cord to the saddle-girth.

Sixth—The last remedy I know as follows: Tie a string around the horse's ear, close to the head; this will divert his attention and start him.
