AGRICULTURAL.

The parish church is called God's House; but if all the parishioners rightly used their matrimony, every house in the parish might be called the same.

Only good work pays. To do good work one needs good tools. The man who does good work gets large crops and makes the most money. Work may be thought good until one sees some that is better; and until the best work is seen and done the farmer should never be satisfied.

Home is the place of the highest type religion should especially attend. Home is the sphere of the deepest sorrow; the highest manifestations of religion should assuage its griefs. Home is the place of the greatest outpour of heart to heart, religion should awaken at with the joy of confidence. Home all sources of all fanatic religion should blossom with the abundance of charity. Home is the place for impressions, for instruction and guidance; there should religion open for the nurture of souls and prepare for heavenly translations.
