Being an Editor.

Cleveland and Frances are given a hearty welcome all along their line of travel, and at Chicago the enthusiasm knew no bounds. It's better to be President than editor. The editor gets up in the morning and booms the town. He gives free puffs by the score, and in the evening is cursed by the merchant grown fat off his efforts. If he says "it's a girl" and it's a boy the proud father sharpens the toe of his boot and hunts him up. If he makes mention of it at all the ma is mad, and if he don't the pa is mad. Let him give credit to the wrong minister and there's a howl in the camp of Israel. Dare he say other than the charming and delightful Miss So and So is in town and the young men declare him a beast. He must say everybody is pretty, industrious, full of business, handsome, talented, and stand accused of lying. If a man dies he has to write, "Le went straight to heaven," or "another one of earth's most precious flowers has been transplanted in the sweet beyond," and at night be tormented by the devil for robbing him of his prey. Verily, the editor is acquainted with grief. His is a hard road to travel.

Scrofula

Is one of the most fatal scourges which afflict mankind. It is often inherited, but may be the result of improper vaccination, mercurial poisoning, uncleanliness, and various other causes. Chronic Soros, Ulcers, Abscosses, Cancerous Humors, and, in some cases, Emaciation, and Consumption, result from a scrofulous condition of the blood. This disease can be cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I inherited a scrofulous condition of the blood, which caused a derangement of my whole system.
