

We are not responsible for the views of our correspondents unless specially endorsed.

EUGENE B. DRAKE & SON, Editors and Proprietors.

STATESVILLE: Monday, August 30, 1869.

Stockholders Meeting. The stockholders of the Western North Carolina Railroad assembled in annual meeting, at Newton, on the 29th inst.

The following gentlemen were elected Directors for the ensuing year: Dr. Wm. H. Howerton, Dr. J. J. Mott, G. W. Canfield, C. L. S. Corpening, N. W. Woodfin, J. L. Henry, J. W. Howman, T. R. Caldwell, R. A. Caldwell, R. F. Simonton, S. McD. Tate and C. J. Cowles.

Thanks. The Editors of the AMERICAN, return their thanks for an invitation to attend a Grand Fancy Dress Masked Ball, to be given at the "Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs," Va., on August 31st, in honor of the Press, by the Proprietors, Messrs. Peyton, of that delightful resort.

The trade of Statesville has been quite brisk the past few weeks, brightening up the countenances of our merchants. Although there is much wheat in the country, but little of that article is offering, the farmers holding back, we suppose, for better prices, as there is a prospect of a short corn crop in this section from the drought.

Fire and Loss of Life. The fine flouring mill of Col. J. Cathey, on Pigeon river, with the whole of his crop of wheat this year, was destroyed by fire on Saturday night, last.

Judge Tourgee charged the Grand Jury of Guilford county at the last term of the Court, that all lottery concerns in this State, are unlawful.

Judge Alexander Little died at his residence in Wadesboro, last week.

The numerous seizures of tobacco and whiskey by the Revenue officials, and the loss of the same, ought to admonish those engaged in that business, to comply with the law or cease dealing in the articles.

Editorial Change. Dr. Walter Sites has retired from the editorial chair of the Asheville News, leaving Mr. Stokes sole editor.

The Resources of North Carolina. The above is the title of a handsome 116 page pamphlet—a review of the resources of North Carolina, its natural wealth, condition, and advantages as existing in 1869—addressed to the Capitalists and people of the United States, by Messrs. E. B. Drake & Son, of Statesville, N. C.

When we have more leisure, we intend to refer to this work again, and present its merits more in detail to the public.

The store of Phifer & Hampton, of this place, was broken into and robbed of several articles of merchandise and money, one night last week. A negro, known as Jeff Houston, has been arrested and lodged in jail on suspicion of committing the burglary.

Rev. Peter Doub, D. D., aged 74 years, died in Greensborough, on Tuesday morning last.

The Superior Court for Iredell, Judge Mitchell, will open in this place, on Monday morning, 30th instant, and continue for two weeks should the docket require it.

In some parts of Georgia the cotton plants are so heavy with bolls as to break down, and two bales to the acre are expected.

A Strange Man. He exists in full blast, yet he has not "a drop of radical blood in his veins." By means of an understanding on the part of some, and a true representation on the part of others, he brought himself before the public as a "radical," by the unusual acceptance by his knowledge and consent. Having attended a radical meeting, he accepted his nomination by that party.—Where is his Conservative blood? H.

Hamptonsville, N. C., Aug. 22. Messrs. Editors:—A dislike to see our county represented in so unfavorable a light as regards the Township election has prompted me to inflict on you a few lines to put the matter straight. Out of nineteen magistrates elected three only are radicals and one tie; out of nine clerks, three radicals, and nine constables two only are radicals. Thus you will see our county, Yankin, is entitled to stand in the front rank.

DELICIOUSLY MEDICINAL.—This is the universal verdict pronounced upon PLAIN-TONIC BITTERS by all who have tried them. The well-known health-promoting ingredients from which they are made, and their invaluable merits, as a remedy for indigestion and all its consequent ailments, and the preventive qualities against diseases arising from climatic changes, miasmatic influences and imperfect secretions, are so widely known and so honorably endorsed, that we trust no one will forego the advantages of their use.

MAGNOLIA WATER.—Superior to the best imported German Cologne, and sold at half the price.

An Outrage. We have been reliably informed that on Wednesday before the Township Elections in this county, the Flat River League held a meeting at the house of a negro man named Peter Leathers who lives on the Oxford road about 8 miles from here. A daughter of Mr. James Carrington in going along that road was halted by a negro guard and told she could not pass. She went back home and her old father returned with her. The "guard" halted them both and told them "dat line was de dead line." And this old man and his daughter were not allowed to pass.—Our informant stated it was the general opinion that a white man had put the negroes up to this thing, for fear, lest he might be recognized in the League by the passers-by. It is our duty to place such outrages upon record, that the eyes of the functionaries may not sweetly slumber upon a volcano of barbaric ignorance and wild and excited prejudice.—Hillsboro Rec.

Is there a Lineal Buonaparte Alive? The Imperial Criminal Court of Vienna, has received a letter signed "Prince Eugene Joseph Napoleon Buonaparte," and dated Stuttgart, Jan. 20, of the present year. In it the writer claims to be the son of the King of Rome, the sole offspring of the great Napoleon and Maria Louise, better known in history as the Duke d'Enghien. The claimant avers that his mother, "a descendant of an old and noble Hungarian family," was "very secretly married" to the Duke Reichstadt, by whom she had two children, twins, the writer and a girl, now "the wife of Prince George of Saxony." The writer also claims that as a boy he was raised by a tailor named Ludwig Wurzen, Saxony, on whom he was foisted by the act of his mother, whom, he says, is now living, and of knowledge of whose place of residence he charges his sister—a knowledge he invokes the court to enjoin her to divulge, as also he wishes to have an order for the examination of his birth and baptismal certificate to be entered up. This is the case as made out circumstantially. Of course, only enquiry can demonstrate it to be a truth, or explode it as false. Against the probable truthfulness of the tale, however, exists the fact that the personation of princes has been the dodge of ingenious impostors for centuries, the absence of any rumor even hitherto that the Duke of Reichstadt, who died at 23 of consumption, ever married, and the current impression, fortified by all kinds of sub-historical narration, that the young man was an imbecile in a double sense.—The investigation of the alleged marriage and sonship will hardly arise to the dignity of judicial action, and is likely to furnish only fleeting food for quid nuncs who delight to delve into the private life of the Emperor.

Gravel Walls. James Harris, Esq., is building a store house on the corner of Martin street on his lot opposite the Baptist Grove, and using what is called "gravel" or "concrete" walls. He assures us the cost will be far less than brick; and the experience of builders is that it is more durable than common brick, besides being more ornamental when neatly finished. A mixture, made of granite rock, broken into small fragments and mixed with pieces of brick, and the proper quantity of lime mortar, is put into a bottomless box of the thickness of the walls. Next morning the mortar will have become hardened, and the moulds are slipped up to the way to a foot or two daily. The outside is at last plastered with cement, and neatly pencilled, giving the appearance of being built of cut stone; and they are almost as durable as brick. Workmen are employed upon it daily, and persons who desire to see the process of construction, in view of future building of their own, should call at once.—Raleigh Standard.

A Strange Coincidence. The amiable wife of William Taylor—merchant in Leesburg—died of Typhoid fever on Wednesday the 11th instant. Ten years ago his former wife died the same month; the same day; and just about the same hour.—Hillsboro Recorder.

Failure of Stokes' Mission. WASHINGTON, Aug. 24, 1869. The mission of Colonel Stokes here, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Herald, to try to get the President to interfere in the Tennessee election is regarded as hopeless, even by the most intense radicals, as the President, even if disposed to act, cannot do anything without Congress. It is presumed that he will get rid of Stokes by informing him of that fact, and then console him with the removal of the federal office-holders who assisted in the election of Senter.—Stokes' proposition to have Congress convened in extra session next month to look after Tennessee is regarded as absurd, and it is not believed the President will listen to it.

REMARKABLE CELESTIAL PHENOMENON. About seven minutes after seven o'clock this evening a very unusual celestial display was observed here, by people who happened at the time to be going skyward. A large meteor shot from the northwest towards the north, taking a course slightly downward and then upward in a sort of brilliant form. Starting like a ball of brilliant light it gradually increased as it sped along, leaving a bright, lustrous trail after it, very much like that of a comet, and finally bursting like a rocket, with a tearing jets of light from every portion of its circumference like what the jrr-teclists call a pinwheel.—What was somewhat remarkable about this phenomenon was the fact that long after what appeared to be the body of the meteor itself had disappeared, the lustrous trail remained, now increasing and now diminishing in brilliancy, for at least ten minutes, when it commenced to gradually fade away. The time occupied between the commencement of the display and the bursting, as it seemed of the meteor, must have been at least twelve or fifteen seconds, and the whole time, up to the disappearance of the tail, covered some ten minutes. The phenomenon gave rise to quite a lively excitement in this city. The people who witnessed it gave various opinions as to its cause, some holding that it was really the expected comet which astronomers had declared would be invisible to the naked eye, and others contending that it was merely one of those occasional luminous nebulous displays which are known to occur at this season of the year, and which have little importance in the estimation of scientific folks. With a view to obtaining some reliable information on the subject, your correspondent visited the Naval Observatory, but found that no one there had noticed the occurrence, for the very good reason that no astronomer was on the lookout in the dome of the observatory at the time of the display. Nearly all the astronomers are out of town, not having yet returned from their expeditions to observe the solar eclipse.

How to Increase the Wheat Crop. Wheat has become to be one of the staple crops of Virginia and North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky. Its value has not fallen off in any of the Southern States, but has increased in an extraordinary degree in those States named, within a few years, before and since the war, and all the indications point to an increase in the value of this crop for many years to come. The wheat-consuming population of the United States is increasing steadily, rapidly. The acres yearly put in wheat are not increasing, either so steadily or so rapidly. As a necessary consequence, the demand grows upon the supply and the price goes up. How to increase the wheat crop, therefore, must be for many years a very important question for farmers all over the land, but especially so for the States above named. The most obvious answer would be by sowing more land. However, until another season this course is not practicable. For the present we are confined to certain limits, and whatever is done, must be done, with a view to the growing crop may be very materially increased, to wit: by manuring and by rolling and harrowing. Of the benefits of manuring wheat; the farmers of America, as a class, know nothing. Very few have ever tried the experiment, and the great majority are utterly ignorant of the results of the experiments having been made. Nevertheless, it is quite certain that the judicious use of the land plaster has in many cases increased the yield of a wheat crop from ten to twenty per cent. Our purpose, however, is not to speak so much of the benefit of manuring, as of the benefit of rolling and harrowing wheat in the spring.

Fearful Death by Lightning. A terrible calamity occurred in the town of Caldwell, N. J., on Sunday evening last, the particulars of which are given by the Times as follows: "A young man named Stephen Pierce was walking home from the pany with Episcopal Church in company with a sister, when they were overtaken by a violent storm, which was preceded and accompanied most alarmingly by thunder and lightning. The entire village was suddenly illuminated with an intense light, and Pierce and his companion fell to the ground. The lady was stunned, but she soon recovered and called for help. When help arrived, nothing was found of the young man who accompanied her but mangled remains. His boots were stripped from his feet, his limbs were severed and lacerated, and the features were not recognizable by those who had known him in life. The unfortunate young man is said to be the third of his family who have lost their lives by the same cause."

A Phenomenon. A most singular phenomenon occurred at midday on Saturday near the village of Amsterdam, in this county. About two hundred yards north of the village is an open lot, and at 12 o'clock while villagers were taking dinner, a luminous body was seen to settle near the centre of it. It is represented by four or five different parties, who witnessed it from several points, to have assumed a square shape, and shooting up into a column about three or four feet in height and about two feet in thickness. The sun was shining brightly at the time, and under its rays the object glittered like a column of burnished silver. The phenomenon faded away, and in ten minutes' time it had entirely disappeared. Those who saw it were unable to tell what it was. It seemed to inspire terror and respect rather than admiration. After it had disappeared a number of persons visited the spot, but not a trace of anything unusual could be found. Similar objects have been seen in the neighborhood on several occasions during the night time, or so bright as this. The land in the immediate vicinity is very fertile, being no swamp about, otherwise the phenomenon might be accounted for. We do not know whether the Jack-o'-lanterns, as some large portions of our friends versed in the sciences, can solve the mystery.—Lancaster (Pa.) Express.

Modification of the Income Tax. The proposed modification of the income tax, which now being agitated, is an excellent thing, but its entire abolition would be still better.—No form of taxation has proved so objectionable or so fatal of demoralization as this. We do not exclude the nefarious whiskey traffic when we say that the attempts to affect the income tax have been more injurious in producing fraud and perjury than any other method of collecting the revenues of the government. Moreover, it is an unprofitable tax because the cost of collecting is disproportionately large. It is particularly offensive and unpopular because of its inquisitorial character. Our people are too independent to permit their private affairs to be spied into by vulgar and partially irresponsible officials, and through them exhibited to the public. Hence the collection of the income tax has been a source of general dissatisfaction, which is increasing by the belief that only a small portion of the revenue thus obtained goes to the Treasury and a very large portion to the various officials.

Besides, it is well understood that the heavy tax imposed on the incomes of hard working people is not a necessity. As the new views, which it appears are just now finding favor in Washington, show that the expenses of the Government can be obtained from the Revenue on whiskey, tobacco and other luxuries as well as on stamps, there is no reason why there should not be a very extensive modification of the income tax. When Senator Sherman, of Ohio, introduced in favor of the continuance of the income tax the other day he was mis taken. It is a most unpopular way of raising the public revenue. The experiment to collect a tax of two dollars a gallon on whiskey proved a failure and demoralized the whole whiskey trade. But the collection of one dollar, as now proposed, may probably be accomplished without any difficulty. It seems, according to the figures, that eighty millions per annum can be raised on whiskey by doubling the present duty; that thirty millions can be obtained on tobacco, ten millions from stamps, ten more from licenses, leaving only fifty millions to be raised by tax on incomes in order to provide for the entire expense of the nation. If a modification is to be made in any one of these taxes, by all means let it be in the odious, annoying and inquisitorial income tax.—N. Y. Herald.

The Meditated Wrong Upon Virginia. We learn that a brother of Governor Walker, now in this city, recently had an interview with Gen. Canby, in which the latter distinctly declared his purpose to enforce the test oath against the members of the Legislature. The object of Mr. Walker's call upon Gen. Canby was to ascertain by real intentions, concerning which many conflicting statements have appeared in print. Gen. Canby told his visitor that Virginia could not be regarded as a State de facto until after her Senators were elected and admitted to Congress. Therefore the new Constitution which abrogates the test oath was not now in force, and members of the General Assembly (although elected under it) could not be exempted from taking the oath. Beyond this important point, the military ruler of Virginia did not choose to be very communicative. It is evident that he is waiting for more precise instructions from Washington, and it may be that he will have to wait for some time yet. The cabinet seems to be split up on the subject. The more conservative portion, such as G. W. Fish, General R. Johnson and Cox, are said to oppose the test oath tyranny, but are overruled by such fiery radicals as Boutwell and Hens, and the outside pressure of radical Senators and Congressmen. President Grant is represented as on the fence, ready to tip either way according to the preponderance of advice, but we cannot lend full credence to that statement. There is no doubt, however, that a plot is meditated by which all the fruits of the late Virginia elections are to be destroyed, and that the present policy is only a device to retard to meet some possible emergency of consequences they and on the brink of intended wrong doing.—New York Journal of Commerce.

A Negro Lynched at Paducah, Ky. The Paducah (Ky.) Herald of Wednesday says: "Vengeance, speedy and terrible, has overtaken the negro band Bally, who was lodged in our jail on Sunday evening for a crime too horrible to be repeated in our columns. About eleven o'clock and thirty-five minutes last night a party of seventy-five or eighty men from the country, disguised in masks, went to the jail, surrounded Mr. Davis, the under jailer, and demanded that he should show them to the cell where Bally was confined.—Mr. Davis refused at first, but seeing how hopeless resistance would be to such a body of men heavily armed, he yielded and conducted them to the cell. The negro was taken out, a rope put around his neck, and marched out Broadway. We suppose his carcass this morning is ornamenting some tree in his neighborhood. That the negro got his just deserts no candid man will for a moment question, but still we regret that the law has been thus anticipated and mob violence resorted to."

An Eclipse Discovery. Professor Winlock, of Harvard College, was in Louisville, Ky., on Wednesday, and is bringing back the results of his observations on the eclipse. The Courier says: "His most remarkable discovery, however, far surpassing those of Janssen, in India, is the presence of an ocean of magnesium in the sun. Of the six new lines discovered by him, four are magnesium. It is therefore unnecessary for any earth born mortal to claim that he discovered the power that magnesium possesses for making a brilliant light. Of the five lines known before the discovery of six new ones by Professor Winlock, four are known to be hydrogen. The constitution of the other is unknown."

The Government, says the Western Democrat, as Washington has decided that a man cannot hold an office under the Federal Government and at the same time hold one under the government of the State. A decision was made in the case of a member of our Legislature accepting the office of Assessor or Collector. He is required to resign one of the places.

Murder. From passengers arriving in this city last evening, we learn that a white man named Griffin was killed at his place of business at Whitaker's Turn out, on the W. & W. R. R., yesterday morning. It would seem at a party of four negroes, acting under authority of a warrant issued by another negro who claimed to be a magistrate, attempted to arrest Mr. Griffin, who, refusing to acknowledge the validity of the warrant, was shot dead by them in his own store. The negroes then took to the woods, and at last accounts had not been arrested.—Wil. Journal.

Personal. We learn from Capt. Obadiah Woodson that his wife and two children were poisoned on Monday morning. About 10 o'clock in the day, the children asked for coffee, when Mrs. Woodson ordered the servants to bring her some to make it. Soon the coffee was made, brought in, and Mrs. Woodson and the children drank of it. An hour or so afterwards they were all violently sick, vomiting and giving evident signs of being poisoned. Drs. Whitehead and Sumner were called in, and pronounced them poisoned, and it is thought by the coffee.

In a speech at Lynchburg, recently, Horace Greeley, said: "What the people of Virginia, needed, was not so much Northern capital, or immigration from abroad, as unity and determination among her own people to develop her own resources." Horace was right, and in our opinion, that is just what is wanted in North Carolina. Our people are standing still, says the Asheville News, waiting for something to turn up.

Voorhees positively declines to run for Governor of Indiana.

A Miss Wallace of Newbern was badly burnt while filling a kerosene lamp.

Jefferson Davis is now making a tour through Scotland, accompanied by Dr. Charles Mackay.

Special Notices. ABATIC CHOLERA IN CHINA. PAIN KILLER. (From Dr. R. T. Drake, Statesville, N. C., to the Editors of the American.)

The Great Medical Mistake. It is a common mistake to suppose that a fever is a disease, and that it should be treated as such. It is only a symptom of some other disease, and should be treated as such.

To Consumptives. The advertisement, having been returned to health by a few weeks, by a very simple remedy, after having suffered several years with a severe form of consumption, and had tried almost every medicine known to man, I feel it my duty to inform you of the success of the remedy.

Errors of Youth. A gentleman who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will, for the sake of suffering humanity, and for the sake of his own peace of mind, and for the sake of his own health, and for the sake of his own happiness, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake of his own grandeur, and for the sake of his own magnificence, and for the sake of his own splendor, and for the sake of his own glory, and for the sake of his own fame, and for the sake of his own honor, and for the sake of his own reputation, and for the sake of his own credit, and for the sake of his own respectability, and for the sake of his own dignity, and for the sake