

WORKING IN A "TUBE"

Remarkable Experience in a Lock in Compressed Air.

7 FORTY POUNDS PRESSURE

The Way It Feels When the Valve is First Opened and the Chamber Fills With the Rushing Air and Fog. Why You Don't Collapse or Explode.

As the lockkeeper turns the valve, writes A. W. Rother in Appleton's Magazine, there is a scarp raising screech as if your ear were next the safety valve of a locomotive blowing steam, and as the rushing air expands it fills the chamber with fog so dense that you cannot see your hand before your eyes. Wider and wilder the valve is opened, the fog becoming even denser and the racket increasing until the air fairly drowns and your eyes and eardrums and your very soul tremble with the air that is vibrating about you.

No sooner is the big valve opened than you feel the pressure against your eardrums. A big wall of cotton seems thrust into each ear, and it's big fingers seem to push the walls inward and more firmly until each time when you swallow or blow into your nose the sensation disappears only to begin anew. Should you purposely delay swallowing, within twenty seconds the pain becomes intense and finally excruciating, as if a pair of knitting needles were being pushed deep into your ears.

Nothing short of the faith that others successfully withstand these sensations prevents you from becoming unduly excited, for actually you are in the throes of about as disagreeable a situation as you care to meet. For the eternity of half a minute the racket and fog and ear pains continue. Then the noise ceases as suddenly as it began. Out of the fog comes the voice of your guide.

"Feeling all right? Ears all right? No trouble breathing? Oh, you're all right!" Again the valve screeches and the air drowns, the top of your head throbs, and you are shaken within and without. Gradually, after the lapse of ten minutes, when the pressures in the head and the lock become more equalized, the din begins to slacken. Then it falls more and more, and fades to nothing, after which the lockman opens the leading door and you gaze upon another length of "tube" like that you left behind.

How does it feel to be under forty pounds pressure? There is no sensation to it—none whatever—which is the trouble, for in case your heart is going to give out there is no warning symptom until too late. Against every square foot of the surface of your body is a pressure of 70 pounds, and the only thing that prevents you from being squashed is the 7500 pounds per square foot pressure inside of you, yet you do not feel this.

Not a Question of Grammar. The green reporter turned to Editor McKelway. "Which should I say, I asked hesitatingly. 'My boy Henry laid an egg on the table?'"

Well, said Editor McKelway impatiently, "if you want something to crow over, and here's that kind of a henry, let him lay it on the table if he can. Otherwise have him put it there."

His Distinction. A solemn funeral procession, slowly winding its way up the slope from the church to the grave, was interrupted by the old vengeur, who, pulling his forelock in the usual rustic style, addressed the clergyman, whispering in a confidential manner: "Please, sir, corpse's brother wishes to speak to you!"—London Tit-Bits.

A Nautical Gossip. Passenger—What makes this boat pitch so? Sailor—That's a nautical secret, man, that we don't like to give away; but, seeing it's you, I don't mind telling you that it's the waves.—San Francisco Call.

He Wanted to Know. The Employer (coldly)—Why are you so late? The Subordinate (guiltily)—There were two wrecks on the track this morning, and— The Employer (testily)—Who was the other one?

Solicitors. An old lady unaccustomed to traveling innocently seated herself in a first class carriage, although she only had a third class ticket. The guard, thinking she had made a mistake, popped his head into the carriage and inquired, "Are you first class, ma'am?" "No, sir, not altogether," she replied, "but much brighter than I was, thank you."—London Seraps.

Cause for Worry. "Did you have a good time at your musical?" "No," answered Mr. Cumrox. "Every time the band played anything I enjoyed I got worried for fear it wasn't classical enough to be the money's worth."—Washington Star.

Gets It Weak. Hinks—Does strong coffee keep you awake? Jinks—How do I know?—Somerville Journal.

NOT GOOD PATIENTS.

Doctors Are Hard to Manage, Says a Trained Nurse.

"I suppose it is treason to my superior officer to say so, but doctors are certainly not easy patients, in management," remarked the trained nurse. "At least, this has always been my experience, and most nurses you will find agree with me in the matter. I have recently been nursing a physician through typhoid, and my experience with him was typical of the cases of the profession in general. 'Doctors know altogether too much for their own good,' you say, and see each new symptom is recognized, and it is an unfavorable one, why, the patient's weakened condition usually leads him to lay great stress upon it. Then, since he has always been in a position to issue orders to the nurse, he cannot easily bring himself to take orders from her, and he is disposed to criticize and take exception to treatment which the ordinary patient receives as a matter of course. 'But perhaps the most troublesome thing of all is the habit which the doctor has for talking his temperature. If he has a moderately high fever and is allowed to use the thermometer as often as he wishes he can fret and worry over the result enough to read his temperature up materially. More than once rather than exasperate a physician patient by a refusal to let him have the thermometer and rather at the same time than let him know just how high his fever is I have dropped the instrument just as I was in the act of handing it to him. Of course I apologize for my carelessness at such times, and the regret really does not have to be all assumed, for I am at the expense of buying myself a new thermometer. 'At one time I had an inaccurate instrument, which never registered high enough, and I used to call it my doctor's thermometer. By a little doctorly I could substitute this for the one I actually used myself, and the encouragingly low temperature it would show would greatly please the patient.'—New York Times.

Capping Verses. On going into the rooms of one of his friends who was absent Dr. Mansel saw on the table the following lines of a poem in the following lofty style: The sun's dependent heat Illumined the depths of the sea. Taking up a pen, he completed the stanza in the following witty way: The fishes, beginning to sweat, Cried, "Thank it, how hot we shall be!" Dr. Watson, regius professor of divinity, had at one time been tutor of Trinity, and when he was made bishop of Landaff an honest publican in Cambridge, who kept an inn called the Bishop's Head, out of respect to Dr. Watson changed his sign and replaced the head of Bishop Blaise by that of Bishop Watson. This transfer drew from Mansel, who probably had some grudge against the late tutor, the following epigram: Two of a trade can never agree— No proverb ever was juster. They're all a-buzzing round you see, And put up Bishop Bluster. —London Chronicle.

What is Patriotism? What is patriotism? Is it a narrow affection for the spot where a man was born? Are the very clods where we tread entitled to this ardent preference because they are greener? No, sir. This is not the character of the virtue, and it soars higher for its object. It is an extended self love, mingling with all the enjoyments of life and twisting itself with the minutest filaments of the heart. It is thus that we obey the laws of society, because they are the laws of virtue. In their authority we see not the array of force and terror, but the venerable image of our country's honor. Every good citizen makes that honor his own and cherishes it not only as precious, but as sacred. He is willing to risk his life in its defense and is conscious that he gains protection while he gives it.—Fisher Ames.

Laziness is the deadliest of all diseases, for the disease itself prevents one from taking the remedy.

SAW HIS OPPORTUNITY. The Reporter Soaked It and Got His Real Start in Life. All the city traveling public loves a strap hanger because it has a fellow feeling for him. This is why the story of how Frank Vanderlip, the banker, got his start has an almost universal appeal. It happened when Vanderlip was a reporter on a Chicago newspaper and writing financial news. The traction situation then, as now, was almost impassable. Charles T. Yerkes was traction dictator, and the stockholders and the public never had a word to say in the conduct of the roads. Nor could they get any definite idea of the financial condition of the properties.

The time for the annual meeting of the stockholders of the principal road came along. At all the meetings Mr. Yerkes had rattled off the reports in the usual unimpeachable corporate way, and no one knew what was doing. So Vanderlip planned a coup. He bought a share of stock, which admitted him to the meeting. He had been a stenographer before he became a newspaper man. When Mr. Yerkes sailed into his breezy explanation of finances the young reporter took down everything he said. Mr. Yerkes used one striking phrase, and it was this: "The stockholders who have seats pay the operating expenses, but the strap hangers pay your dividends."

The next day the sentence topped Vanderlip's account of the meeting. It aroused a storm of discussion, for it laid bare some of the traction methods; also it got Vanderlip a raise in salary and a promotion.—Saturday Evening Post.

Power of Imagination. Illustrating the strange power of the imagination, E. P. Denson, author of "Dodo," tells this incident: A doctor he knew had found it necessary to give a patient for many evenings an injection of morphia to enable him to get some sleep. After awhile the doctor thought it advisable to stop the morphia, and for two nights his patient was unable to sleep, owing to great pain. On the third night the doctor, being still unwilling to administer morphia, injected plain water instead. The man slept perfectly and awoke in the morning with what is known as a morphia mouth.

Incapacitate Advice. Mrs. Ascum—Miss Crabbe is a member of your suffrage club, isn't she? Mrs. Gaddie—No, we had to expel her. We were discussing the servant girl question the other day and she had the impudence to say that if we only had the servant question wouldn't bother us at all.—Philadelphia Press.

Sensitive. Motorist Conroy (to her pardon, sub, but kin' yo' inform me how many miles it am teh Jayville? The Farmer—Want as the crow flies—Motorist Conroy—Don't git pussional, sub, don't git pussional!—Puck.

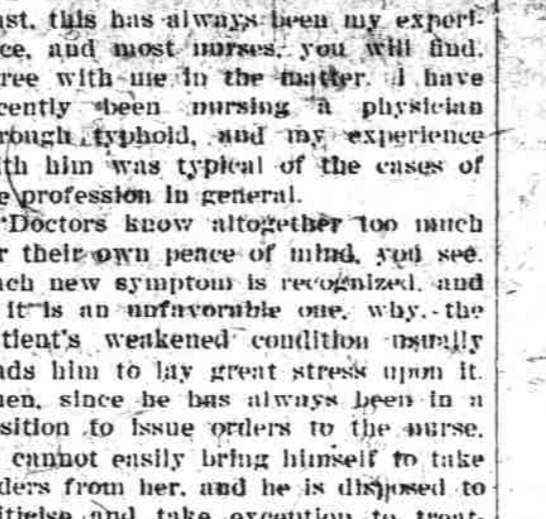

One Advantage. "That do you think of this idea of having dogs for caddies?" asked the old golfer. "It's a good idea," replied the beginner. "The dogs can't laugh at you!"—London Standard.

A Bit of Sarcasm. A young man who had prolonged his call on his sweetheart a few nights ago was surprised when a window in an upper story was raised as he left the house and the voice of the mistress called out, "Leave an extra quart this morning, please!"—Argonaut.

Getting It Right. It was on a street car in the city of Washington. Two colored women in cheaply gorgeous splendor were talking and one chanced to mention a Mr. Jinks in her conversation. "Excuse me," said the other woman, "but his name is not Jinks. It is Mr. Jinks." "Oh, I sees," said the other woman complacently. "It says that you puts de accent on de pronoun."—Lippincott.

OUR BOYS AT FULTON HEIGHTS

Spencer second team played Salisbury second team Monday at Fulton Heights before interested spectators. The game was hotly played. Batting for Spencer, O. Albright, Burton and Kizziah; for Salisbury, Davidson and Sykes. Score 9 to 7 in favor of Spencer. Features, stick work of G. Albright was fine, he having made five hits out of five times up, two of them being for two runs.

THE SPENCER Y. M. C. A. LIBRARY. The library books at the Y. M. C. A., are now classified and ready for use. Twenty-one library cards were issued Monday. Several new members have been secured as a result of the splendid library being put into use. One book at a time can be taken home for two weeks, where any member of the family can read same. Now is the time to join the Y. M. C. A., to take advantage of the books, while they are new. The membership is only five dollars a year, which includes the use of the library, and other privileges.

Most of the books are late fiction such as the average person is anxious to read. The reference books recently added, are Rand McNally's Standard Atlas of the world, Funk and Wagnalls Twentieth Century Standard Dictionary; the Science of Railways by Kirkman, Encyclopaedia Britannica, and Ripditch's History of the world.

MOONLIGHT RIDE WITHOUT THE MOON. A STRAW-WAND-STUDEBAKER-WAGON TOUR TO SOWERS' FERRY. Last evening at 6:15, by a Waterbury watch, a gay party of ladies and gentlemen, the pride of Spencer, disposed themselves as uncomfortably as the straw-stern space in three prairie schooners would permit, and proceeded, hilariously, but decorously, to make two-inch tracks in the dust-laden streets and out in the highway leading to the rippling, gurgling and sparkling Yadkin. The party consisted of the following: Stars and Satellites, to-wit: Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Monk, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Prettyman, Mrs. W. C. Gatwood, Mrs. J. N. Boone, Miss Louie Proffman with D. B. Kizziah, Miss Pattie Prince Turnball with C. M. Swigwood, Miss Mamie Hatley with J. P. Lynch, Miss Treze Sanford with R. N. Booker, Miss Lettie Miller with J. M. Sink, Miss Clara Kaderly with J. K. Dorsett, Miss Clyde Satt with T. P. Fowler, Miss Edie Talbert with R. J. Goode, Miss Mattie Jenkins with R. C. Johnson, Miss Edith Kerschner with S. T. Dorsett.

Ice cream, between feminine screams, fried chicken and many other delights, gave zest and vitality to the party. In the novel affair. Games were played, excursions across the unbridged deep were boldly accomplished; conversations sentimental and comical, were sung tunelessly, and then, when the horn of eleven struck, they all came home.

Mrs. Geo. West, her mother, and party, leave to-day for a visit to Asheville, for a day or two.
