Within my heart, O, deving heart ? Thy faith on faith was stayed; On bended knee, he promised me A price—he had not paid!

He pledged his honor and his truth,

To love till death should part;

With love he bought the prize he sought, And thus obtained my heart.

O, happy time!

O, happy clime Through which we idly strayed ! What joy was ours as through the flowers A fragrant path we made

But soon we reached the outer edge Of this our Eden land: Where love had reigned and happy feigned To do the King's command, Q. loving heart!

O, trustful heart! How was thy trust betrayed! With love he bought the heart he sought; But has the price been paid?

If I should live a thousand years, I ne'er again should know
The same regret; or could I forget
Those days of long ago,
When first my heart,
This foolish heart!

Its choicest wealth displayed?
With love 'twas sought, with love 'tw But has the price been paid? The careless tone the unkind word-

The changed and chilling mode, Are these the things affection brings To prove its promise good? Be loth to part
With love, though love entice;
So sharp a trade with hearts is made,

That few will pay their price. Very Singular.

From Bell's Station, Tenu, come the particulars of a most singular phenomenon. William Rowell was struck suddenly deaf and dumb, a few days ago, while en route to Memphis from his place of residence. Out of mere sport, when a newsboy came round and offered him a paper, he feigned to be both deaf and dumb, and in this Thereby avoiding all Drayage way annoyed the vender. The newsboy passed ou, but the unfortunate joker never spoke again. When he began to realize the extent of his misfortune, he got off the train bound for Memphis, Mason's Depot, and took the first return train. On the cars he indulged in load lamentations and cries as if sorely distressed. On his arrival home so soon as he stepped out on the platform, he seized a pencil and a bit of paper from a citizen, and wrote "struck dumb on account of my folly," and continued weeping in most piteaus tones." Making Love With Umbrellas.

A certain dramatic writer, being caught in a shower of rain, took ref-uge under the portico of a handsome dwelling in New York, As soon as he had taken the position, a window was opened, and a lovely female face appeared, which seemed to beam with sympathy and anxiety. She soon retired, and sent him an umbrella by a in love, and thinking from her anxious looks that the feeling was reciprocated, he called on her is the morning, sent up his card, and gave into her hands a very nice umbrella he had purchased in the place of the old shabby one he had borrowed, and then wound up by making a profession of love. The young lady without, even noticing the exchange that had been made, perceiving how her set had been made, perceiving how her set had been misinterpreted, naively replied: "I feel it to be my duty to undeceive you, sir. At the time of the shower I was anxiously expecting the arrival of a gentleman, who is, I confess very dear to me, who wished to see me in private, and my only motive for sending you and my only motive for sending you the umbrella was to get you off the
