PEN PORTRAITS.

SOME MEMBERS OF THE PRESS ASSOCIATION.

As J. P. Cook of the Concord Times Sees Them.

Individually and collectively the North Carolina Press Association is a young, good looking and clever set of fellows. Jim Cook, of Concord Standard, was considered by some the handsomest man in the crowd but this may have been due to the fact that the homeliest ones always sought his companionship. The contrast showed Cook up to advantage. He is a genial, companionable fellow, mild mannered and sad of countenance and it is said of him, that he has been disappointed in love—many times. This was the first time he had assembled himself together with us and bared his imperial brow and caressed his silken mustache in the presence of the august body, and was the occasion of our first meeting with him. We like Cook and hope to afford him an opportunity of laying his heavy head upon our osom and whispering his tale of woe to us again.

SILVER QUESTION!

Free Coinage Fully Discussed!

GOLD, SILVER OR GREENBACKS! Which is the Best For Washington? MCKINLEY IN OHIO.

Notwithstanding Mr. McKinley opened the Ohio campaign with the discussions of silver, Spencer Bros. will open the New Brick Store next to Brown's Bank Sept. 15, and settle the greenback question in connection with the coinage.

Our buyer has been North one week and will not return in two more, he is now picking up bargains to fill the Racket Store to its fullest capacity.

We will say for the benefit of the public, we pay the hard cash for every dollars worth of goods, saving for our customers and ourselves the discounts, which amounts to a nice little sum in 12 months. We don't want you to trade with us because we used to fish together when we were boys. We don't want your trade because we are so closely connected by marriage, neither do we think you under obligations to us because we helped you when it was only our duty.

We want your trade because it pays us, and we know it pays our customers to purchase their goods from the merchant who is independent of these Northern time houses that charge these little unfortunate 30, 60, and 90 days fellows a premium on their letter of introduction.

If you save a dollar every day you come to town, you have made a dollar, you can do so by purchasing your goods at the Racket Store.

Spencer Bros. Dry Goods Emporium which will be filled from bottom to top Sept. 15th.

Remember, these goods will not be bought on time which means an additional profit that must come from the pocket of the consumer.

It means spot cash to the New York dealers, enabling us to sell the same goods lower than they can be obtained by the merchant who buys his goods on time. Try us and be convinced.

Respectfully, SPENCER BROS & Co.

EDUCATION OF BRAINS BEHIND IT.

E. L. Hedrick, of the Taylorsville INDEX, laughed from the time he left home until he parted with him at Greensboro. It was impossible to find out anything about him. The only thing he said while in Winston was "Kurnel," and that incessantly.

James A. Robinson, of the Durham SUN, is a married man, and that accounts for a good paper. Jim Robinson talks in his sleep; this we heard. He is a clever fellow, and may yet be handsome.

F. M. Williams, of the Newton ENTERPRISE, wears red beard and a Roman nose. He is historian for next year. Williams is a good judge of a declamation. No one knew of his marriage.

H. C. Wall, of the Rockingham ROCKET, writes poetry, and you all know him now. He is nearing three score and ten.

Thad R. Manning, of the Henderson GOLD LEAF, is a jolly young fellow. He did not claim being single.

Manning has one bad habit—chewing tobacco. That's the only one. [This is a lie-bel. Our first chew of tobacco was likewise our last one. Suit has been entered against Jim Cook, and we have given bond for the payment of cost—which he will be unable to do when judgement is entered against him.—THE GOLD LEAF.]

John T. Britt, of the Oxford LEDGER, showed evidence of faring well—the Orphan's Asylum is in his town. Britt was popular with all but the fellow that set up lemonade in the vestibule.

H. A. Murrill, of the Hickory PRESS, has no biography. Our Kodak refused to work on him. He is associated with his father, who edits the PRESS.

J. A. Thomas, of the Louisburg TIMES, weighs 200 pounds and was elected president of the association. Mr. Thomas said that he was married. Thomas is a good fellow, and very baldheaded.

W. W. Scott, of the Lenoir TOPIC is mixed up with the new State business and he claims to be very old. He is cutting his third set of teeth. Scott is a lawyer, but he gets no practice.

J. B. Sherrill, of the Concord TIMES, is one of youngest looking members, but he is older than many of us. He is castigated again with the duties of the secretaryship, and bears the burden faithfully.

K. A. Deal is of the State of Wilkes and knows Dr. York. Deal is a nice little fellow, and may yet grow physically. He hung around the EAGLE all week.

A. S. Carson, of the Alleghany STAR, is young and bashful, and has an auburn mustache.

J. M. Gyer, of the Keresville NEWS, refused to answer all questions. He was frightened.

George Blount is a brother of the silver penned Henry. He's old, has a pleasant face and wears a gray beard. He's very quiet.

Absalom Roscower, of the Goldsboro HEADLIGHT, is a curious fellow. He made a speech in which he declared he had a bank account $980 and 2,500 subscribers. Roscower was in charge of this writer, who, when he left him at Greensboro, tagged him for Goldsboro and put him in charge of the conductor.

D. J. Whichard, of the Greenville REFLECTOR, is very young and very small. He wears glasses and an auburn mustache. No one disliked him, and Whichard enjoyed himself.

T. B. Eldridge declared himself out of the business and living on the interest of his labor's fruit.

Jerome Dowd, of the Mecklenburg TIMES, our readers know. He made a speech at the Banquet which brought down the house.

J. M. Roberts, of the Lincolnton COURIER, did not say a word while in Winston. He was mum on all National questions but active on diet matters.

H. A. Latham, of THE WASHINGTON GAZETTE, is young and handsome. He wore white clothes and carried a gold-headed cane given him at the Legislature last winter.

W. F. Marshall, of the Gastonia GAZETTE, is young and enthusiastic. As soon as he was elected poet he left for home.

W. X. Coley, of the Mocksville TIMES, is the one that escaped from the Chicago kidnappers. Will is known in Winston and moved about freely. Out of compassion we will not give the public a description of COLEY.

J. R. Webster, of the Reidsville WEEKLY, is a handsome 50-year-old bachelor, and writes a great deal about trusts, and talked all the week about women and Cleveland.

C. F. Lewis is running a prohibition paper 'tis said. Lewis wore a chin beard and had it blacked. Lewis said that he had no bank account.

C. W. Hunt, of the Burlington NEWS, is a fine fellow, he is married and says he likes newspaper work. Hunt is pretty old, but not feeble.

Joe Daniels, better known as Farmer Joe, was there. He represents about one-tenth of his family, is a good fellow and thinks it a sin to wear a beard. Mr. Daniel is the State Printer, and makes a good one.

I have not used all one bottle yet. I suffered from catarrh for 12 years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bleed almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised in the Boston Budget. I procured a bottle, and since the first days' use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone.—D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget.

LAWN TENNIS. Hints to Beginners.

(CONTINUED.) And now suppose that you have served your game out, and taken a position to receive that of your adversary. What should that position be? As to how far back from the service line it should be, altogether depends on the speed of your opponent's service. If it be a swift service, you may be obliged to stand back of the base line, and when in that position you must watch carefully to see that he does not fool you by dropping a very slow one just over the net. If you are weak backed, don't betray that weakness just before receiving a service by edging over toward the centre-line so as to receive the service on your forehead. It must be your aim to return the service so that the drop is just as close as possible to the base-line of your opponent's court. Do not try to return it too swiftly, for it takes a Renshaw or a Sears to put great speed in the return, and yet cause the ball to strike within a few inches of the base-line. You and I should be satisfied, at least, until we have played longer, to strike near the base-line, without attempting great speed.

And why is it so important to make your return fall close to the base-line? Because it embarrasses your opponent in his stroke, and gives you just so much more time in which to follow your return by running toward the net. You must start immediately after returning the service, and be firmly entrenched in your proper position between the net and service-line by the time the ball comes back. I know that almost all our expert players agree in considering this of the utmost importance. There is one contingency, and only one, in which it would not be proper to run to the net after the first return. This is when you see that your return is not well directed toward the base-line, but will fall, perhaps, within the service-line of your opponent's court. This must happen sometimes to the best of players, and in such a case it becomes so easy for your adversary to place his return on either side of you, if you are at the net, that discretion is distinctly "the better part of valor," and you do well to retire to the back of the court and await another chance to run up. Perhaps your opponent may be one of those who believe in sometimes running toward the net immediately after serving. If he tries it with you, do not become excited when you see him running up; keep cool, and let him place his return where he likes. There are two plays you may make either of which will bother him exceedingly. If he is swiftly approaching the net through the middle of the court, a ball of moderate speed down the side-line will be out of his reach. But if he anticipates your stroke down the side, and so approaches the net along that side, then he must leave the remaining portion of the court unguarded, and as he runs up you can easily place the ball across the court in front of him. I think I have now covered nearly all of the points which arise when you are serving or receiving a service, and the rest of the set is mainly a repetition of these points. S.

HAPPY HOOSIERS.

Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from Kidney and Liver trouble."

John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best Kidney and Liver medicine, made me feel like a new man."

J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: "Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c a bottle at Bogart's."

HUSBANDS AND WIVES.

KIDS ONE AND TWO.

The Story Written by one Who Knows.

I see a communication in your most excellent paper of Aug. 6, entitled, "For Shame." In this article there seems to be a plurality of husbands and wives. It is my fortune to be informed as to their past record. I will briefly but truthfully tell the sad story. A man of sad experience, for his experience must be sad, courted a bright girl of 16 summers; their love became so intense that they were made one by a Christian pastor, who always before tied knots well, but from some cause failed to take a half-hitch on that occasion. In a short time afterwards the husband went to sea leaving the youthful bride under the parental care and supervision of his father. Early he returned to his youthful bride with tokens of his love, which seemed to make her cheerful and gay. Time sped by swiftly while the sailor husband remained at home. He was called to duty again by his captain, he kissed his youthful bride again good bye; the briny tear was seen to stand upon his cheek, while hers came down like rain. He went and came as the months sped by leaving the lonely wife each time under the care of his father. He returned once to find a bouncing girl baby to make home cheerful by the beat of kid No. 1. He takes another trip to sea leaving the kid and its youthful mother under the care of grandpa. Weeks passed by like years, and only few at that, when the wife grew weary of watching and despondent with fear, finds grandpa visiting friends or relations, sells goods and chattels including pork and flour and absconds to parts unknown. Grandpa returns and finds that the mother and kid had gone visiting. A careful examination showed grandpa that the goods and chattels had gone visiting also. So grandpa made inquiry of the matter and was informed that there had been a private sale in the neighborhood, and that the mother had been seen going down to the boat with a slim, hatchet-faced man carrying the kid. Well, grandpa made home as cheerful as possible, having only the pet dog and bob-tailed cat to cheer his sad moments. Time sped on swiftly; the sailor husband returned and with a broken heart heard the sad story of the departure of the youthful wife and kid No. 1. The husband took the story remarkably well until grandpa gets to the part where his love's companion absconded with a slim hatchet-faced man. The husband became infuriated with rage. He cooled down, however, and took to himself wife No. 2. He went to sea no more for fear he would lose wife No. 2. He took a berth on a tug, and they seemed to be tugging along very well until recently wife No. 1 sends husband No. 2 from Norfolk to this county to look after some real-estate. Husband No. 2 returns to wife No. 1, and informs her that there are parties near Yeatesville who wish to purchase her land. She duly arrives. In a short time afterwards, she finds the parties and bargains to sell but got a good title; so wife No. 1 informs the J. P., that she only claimed husband No. 1. Husband No. 1 was informed of the matter and he comes under obligations to sign his right for $25. It was the misfortune of husband No. 1 not to see wife No. 1 while on her first trip. Notwithstanding she was the wife of two husbands she had many visitors. The ladies in this section do not like for a woman to have two husbands, so she did not take well among them. She sold one tract of land and quietly returned to Norfolk, and informed husband No. 2 that she had acted the part of Peter and denied him. After a careful explanation to husband No. 2, he received her kindly to his once sad heart, only to be left again in a few days. She was written to by relations, once a day for two or three days, to come and make a title to another tract of land. No news came, she was telegraphed for but still she was silent as death. While relatives stood watching and waiting for a word from her pen, husband No. 1 had met wife and kid

No. 1 in Jamesville and brought them safe to her sister. Husband No. 1 returned the same afternoon to wife No. 2. After a fond embrace of wife No. 2 and a sweet kiss from kid No. 2, they told him of the lonely moments which they had spent watching for him. He, no doubt, made some apology for his delayed trip and next day shouldered his foot and walked 21 miles to see wife and kid No. 1. He found them as cheerful as lambs and remained with them three or four days. We imagine from the long and protracted strolls which were taken by them over hill and dale, gathering flowers by moonlight and enjoying the gentle zephyrs of summer by starlight, that husband No. 1 had a glorious reunion, with wife No. 1. He did not leave her in 3 or four days. She remained by his side while he related to her in broken tones the bright days of long ago, when both were made one by the good old pastor; his parting kiss when he was summoned by the captain to leave her; the sparkling tears which flowed so freely from her eyes; the first look and kiss from kid No. 1; the sad story of grandpa, the pet dog and bob-tailed cat—how they all missed the poor little wife No. 1 and how the mournful beat of kid No. 1 was missed by husband No. 1 on his return, time sped on. Wife No. 1 thought that husband No. 2 had become weary of watching and waiting so long so she starts to meet husband No. 2 and leaves husband No. 1 to shoulder his foot again and carry it 21 miles to Washington where he meets wife and kid No. 2. Pretty were the times in town. They say the last words to wife No. 1 by husband No. 1 was "care for the kid." Turn on more light? Novus Homo.

HUMAN INSTINCT.

So powerful is human instinct, that some of its suggestions become embodied in social household customs. The people know and that at the beginning of the spring season the system needs an alternative and a purifying tonic and a stimulant. In all parts of the country, it is the custom for the housewife to dose her brood with sassafras tea. Among the simple remedies that our ancestors employed, this decoction has continued to hold its own. The demand for a spring alternative and tonic, however, is filled more efficaciously by S. S. S., which is itself a simple nature's remedial medicine should be. It purifies the blood, cleanses and strengthens the system, and prepares the human machine to stand the wear and tear of the summer months.

ABBOT'S EAST INDIAN CORN PAINT.

A DISFIGURED COUNTENANCE.

Many people who would scarcely notice an armless or legless man will deprecate and remark on any blemish of the human face, and dive into all sorts of speculations as to its cause and attendant circumstances. If you doubt this assertion become possessed of a discolored optic and note how much attention it will invite. A black eye is generally avoidable, but blotches, pimples and other scrofulous and eruptive marks stand upon us without warning, and are frequently the first intimation of the fact that our blood is going wrong. A prompt and systematic use of P. P. P. (Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium), will purify the blood, cleanse the skin and give back to the face nature's familiar, rugged signs of health.
