BREAD IN THE HOME

If home-baked bread were uniformly well made it would be used more extensively than at present in place of more expensive foods, say specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture, and this would be a distinct economy. From the standpoint of nutrition it makes very little difference whether breadstuffs are served in the form of bread or in the form of breakfast cereals, side dishes with meats, or desserts. A man engaged in moderate muscular work can profitably consume about three-fourths of a pound a day or breadstuffs in any one of these forms. This quantity is the equivalent of 1 pound of baked bread. As a matter of fact, however, it is not probable that in the average family this quantity is consumed and the deficiency is made up by the use of more expensive substances. Of course, bread alone is not sufficient for the maintenance of health, but from both an economical and a hygienic point of view it should be used more extensively than it usually is.

In a new publication of the Department, Farmers' Bulletin 807, detailed directions for the making of bread in the home are given, together with a number of convenient recipes for homemade biscuit, rolls, and bread in which rice or potatoes are used with flour. The bulletin also gives a score card by means of which it is suggested the housewife can estimate the merit of her product.

AN OUNCE OF MEAT

"Many a Mickle Makes a Muckle"

An ounce of edible meat—lean meat fat and lean, suet or fat trimmed from steak, chop, or roast—seems hardly worth saving.

Many households take just this view of the matter—do not trouble to put such an insignificant scrap into the ice box or soup pot—do not bother to save for cookery a spoonful or two of drippings or a tiny bit of suet or fat.

Yet if every one of our 20,000,000 American families on the average wastes each day only 1 ounce of edible meat or fat, it means a daily waste of 1,250,000 pounds of animal food—456,000,000 pounds of valuable animal food a year.

At average dressed weights, it would take the gross weight of over 875,000 steers, or over 3,000,000 hogs—bones and all—to provide this weight of meat or fat for each garbage pail or kitchen sink. If the bones and butcher's waste are eliminated, these figures would be increased to 1,150,000 cattle and 3,700,000 hogs.

Or, again if the waste were distributed according to the per capita consumption of the various meats (excluding bones), it would use up a combined herd of over 538,000 beef animals, 291,000 calves, over 625,000 sheep and lambs, and over 2,132,000 hogs.

Millions of tons of feed and hay, the grass from vast pastures, and the labor of armies of cattlemen and butchers also would be scrapped by this meat-waste route.

But every household doesn't waste an ounce of meat or fat every day? Very well; make it one out of a hundred families, but keep in mind that all meat allowed to spoil and all meat and fat rendered inedible by improper cooking, scorching, or burning must be counted waste. Make it an ounce every other day or one a month. Such waste still would be unendurable when meat is scarce and when fat is of such vital food importance to many nations.

Waste of meat or fat is inexcusable. Every bit of lean meat can be used in soups, stews, or in combination with cereals; every spoonful of fat can be employed in cookery; every bit of dripping and gravy can be saved so easily and used to add flavor and nourishment to other dishes.

The United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., or your State Agricultural college will tell you how to use bits of meat to make appetizing and nutritious dishes and how to use left-over fat in cookery.

To stop advertising is to be forgotten. Men whose names you once heard every day you now think of once a year. And yet they are still there. They only stopped advertising.
