A Colyum Of Thoughts From Here There, Yonder

It has been said that if fifteen minutes was spent in thought each day, irrespective of creed, sect, cult or inclination, one's life would be a brilliant example of christian citizenship. The truth of the statement is apparent.

To daily take stock of resources and ultimate purpose of existence, to meditate the glorious possibilities of this passing state is to give one's daily walk a wholesome atmosphere and connect one's soul with the eternal.

It is when reason is dethroned by the call of the senses, when one falls to the law of riotious impulse, that the great purposes of life are scorned and its opportunities neglected.

To consider is the first step of reform. Individual happiness and the perpetuation of life's ideals are dependent upon the thought of our cit-road of fancy.

The Warren County Summer School opened at the academy this morning under the direction of Supt. J. Edward Allen. The other members of the faculty are Misses Ila Justice, of Rutherfordton and Miss Louise Dowtin, of this city.

The course of study is planned for six weeks, five study days to the week. Over a dozen teachers are enrolled for this required training.

It is of interest to know in this connection that over fifteen other school teachers of the county are taking this training at accredited summer schools and that the Warren ceaching force is making preparation for their duties the coming year.

Several social features will be tendered the school while here and efforts exerted to make the six week period one of enjoyment as of profit.

Colored Youth And Stolen Cow Tracked To Henderson Monday Morning

TRIED TO SELL STOLEN PROPERTY TO SHERIFF

Couldn't Answer Questions And Was Arrested; Tried Before Justice Allen This Morning And Bound Over To Court.

"Foot prints on the sands of Time" told their story to the poet, and to come from the sublime to the ridicuulous, the cow's tracks in the sands of the road between the home of old "aunt" Gracie Alston and the town of Henderson pointed the way to the arrest of Robert Lee Jones, charged with "making tracks with the cow" for unlawful purposes. Monday morning "aunt" Gracie could not find her cow at the usual place and made dilligent search. Looking in the sands of the road she discovered the tracks of a cow and the footprints of a heelless shoe. Tracing this sign of past events and of probable coming events, she was convinced that the tracks of the cow were made by her bovine. Telling her story to Mr. John D. Newell, the second, with whom she had "a crop" he proceded to investigate. Following the tracks and getting Elias Christmas, colored, to help him, they found themselves in the town of Henderson. Inquiry developed the fact that a colored boy was offering a cow for sale, and in fact was tigation proved the cow to be the property of "aunt" Gracie and the boy in custody to be Robert Lee Jones. Jones denied stealing the cow, but said he was offering her for sale for another boy. Jones was brought to Warrenton and a preliminary investigation was made yesteday. Upon his statement that he could prove himself innocent the case was continued to ten o'clock this morning.

This morning the evidence of the 'sands of the road" was told by the trackers-the tracks of a cow from 'aunt" Gracie Alston's house to the town of Henderson, and the tracks made by a heelless shoe. Robert Lee Jones in whose custody the cow was found has heelless shoes on his feet. Sheriff Royster of Vance county testified that Jones told him that he came from down towards Louisburg; that the cow was the property of his fath-$65., but to take $60. if he had to. On being asked about his white neighbors, Jones could not tell the name of a single one; on being asked about his colored neighbors, he could not tell the name of a single one; upon being asked his own name, said he "didn't know." W. B. Lancstons said Jones told him his name was William Russell, and that he had been working for his father for past six months.
