

CROP OUTLOOK IS GIVEN FOR 1930

Small Increase in Acreage To Tobacco Is Indicated in Crop Survey

NO REPORT ON COTTON

By FRANK PARKER
Agricultural Statistician

RALEIGH, April 17.—About a month ago the farmers throughout the United States reported their intentions of increasing their total crop acreage of about 2 percent this year. As a rule, however, unfavorable weather unusually prevents the farmers from carrying out their plans and, too, there is some loss from drought, floods, etc., before harvesting time.

The National outlook shows an appreciable decrease in the wheat acreage, while peanuts are down 5 percent and hay almost 1 percent. The farmers' planting intentions were secured on all crops except cotton. All crops except the four mentioned above show increases. That the farmers are paying attention to the "Agricultural Outlook" recommendations of last January is evident by the March intentions being largely in line with the Department's recommendations. This is true to a greater extent than ever before, which shows that good publicity was given to the January "Agricultural Outlook Report for 1930."

The spring oat crop shows a 2.5 percent increase for the United States. Most of this increase is due to the plantings of the principal producing States like Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, etc. With average yields the intended acreage should produce a crop of about 1,275,000-000 bushels. While this would be proportionately more than last year, it would be 2 percent less than the average for the last five years. The oat stocks on hand are low, which would indicate good prices. On the other hand, the continued decline in horses and the somewhat unfavorable dairy situation has caused a decline in the demand of oats. Thus, as predicted last January, the price is not expected to improve over that received last year.

Corn shows a general increase over the entire country. Average yields should show about 8.6 percent larger crop than last year. This is expected to result in a somewhat less favorable feed market than during the past three seasons. The European feed crops, whether poor or good this year, will determine the prices in this country. The corn yield in North Carolina was generally good last year. The National carry-over into the next crop year will probably not be materially different from that brought into this year. The number of cattle on feed in the Middle Western States is somewhat larger than last year, while hogs are fewer. The disappearance of corn during the past season has been the smallest since 1924.

The demand of feed crops may occur should the crops of foreign grains during the coming season be averaged or below. The farmers are planning a general increase in feed grain acreage amounting to almost 3 percent. Hay crops are expected to be about the same as were cut last year. Soy beans and cowpeas are expected to show increases. Average yields will give a decided decrease in hays, as last year's production was unusually good.

Peanut farmers show intentions of reducing their acreage about 5 percent. Last year's crop is still hanging heavy on the market. Farmers in North Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee, where the Virginia type peanuts are grown, contemplate as much as a 10 percent decrease in acreage. Considerable carry-over of the large-pod nuts is expected. This situation is due in part to the tendency to use smaller peanuts for salting purposes.

An intended increase of about 2 percent in the acreage of tobacco is reported for North Carolina. The largest increase is primarily in southeastern counties. South Carolina and Georgia also show substantial increases in flue-cured tobacco of the bright leaf type. A yield equal to the five-year average would indicate about 795,000-000 pounds this year in the flue-cured belt of the United States. Stocks last July showed 590,000,000 pounds. Next July the unutilized stocks on hand from previous crops are expected to be between 610 to 620 million pounds. Unless the quality excels that of the 1929 crop, the 4 percent increase in supply is likely to tell a disappointing tale this year.

National conditions explain local supply and demand and probable price trends. "Cash" crops do not look promising.

WHY WE DO IT

Why Your Wife Can't Cook Like Your Mother

By MEHRAN K. THOMSON, Ph. D., Author of "The Springs of Human Action."

"You can't cook like mother," is what every wife has to contend with. In a great many cases it is actually true. Any impartial judge would decide in favor of the mother. The reason is plain. It takes years of experience to make a good cook. The average bride of today does not have a very extensive knowledge in domestic affairs. And yet she has to compete with a veteran. It is like pitting a greenhorn against a seasoned boxer.

Moreover, a man is usually prejudiced in favor of his mother. She is a superior person in his eyes and hence everything she does is of superior quality. This is expressed in the popular song of a man wishing for a "girl like the girl that married dear old dad." The Freudians call it the mother image that all men are supposed to have by which to select a wife.

This theory falls down in cases where a man is so madly in love with his wife that he thinks her a superior person—the queen can do no wrong. Everything she does is wonderful, even her cooking. Perhaps this would be a fine test of love. A man would have to be very much in love with his wife to consider her a better cook than his mother.

Another reason why a man thinks his wife can't cook like his mother is that his mother has the tremendous advantage of having created the taste for the things he likes. In other words, it isn't so much that a man's mother is really a wonderful cook as it is the fact that he was brought up on her cooking and takes it as a model for judging the quality of other cooks.

No matter how poor a cook a man thinks his wife to be, his own children will rise up to say the same thing that he did, "You can't cook like mother," to their respective wives.

Every man's wife is a wonderful cook. No man's wife can cook like his mother. Most men think it; some men speak it; every wife feels the reproach whether uttered or unexpressed.

Hudson Gives Tips On Best Methods Growing Melons

The North Carolina farm without a watermelon patch is denying itself the pleasure of having at home a supply of the most delicious crop grown in the South.

"Not only do watermelons contain those essential food elements known as vitamins, but the melons are tasty and delicious. Growing the crop is neither difficult nor expensive," says C. R. Hudson, veteran extension worker at State College. "Most any old piece of poor, broomsedge land will produce fine flavored melons when properly fertilized. A well-drained, sandy loam soil, sloping to the south is best. Stiff clay soils and low moist soils rarely give good results.

To start, mark off the land in spaces seven to eight feet wide. Plow to these furrows with a turn plow until the water furrow is left between. Now throw two furrows together across these water furrows to make ridges showing where the hills are to be. Where the checks occur put in two shovelful of good, well-rotted manure and a handful of high grade fertilizer. Mix these in the soil well. Now reverse the following operation, throwing two furrows over the water furrow. On these ridges the seed are planted.

WARREN SCHOOLS

ercises will be held on Friday, April 25, at 8 p. m. when announcement of certificates and seals and presentation of seventh grade certificates will be made. A musical fairy play by the grammar grades will follow. The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the Wise Baptist church by the Rev. Oscar Creech of Ahoskie. Music will be furnished by the Wake Forest college quartette. On Monday evening, April 28, the music pupils of the school will give a musical recital under the direction of Miss L. B. Dameron. On Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock graduating exercises will be held. The address of the evening will be delivered by W. T. Bost of Raleigh.

Final exercises at the John R. Hawkins negro high school at Warrenton begin tonight at 8 o'clock and will end on next Thursday, April 24, when final exercises will be held.

The Warren County Training School, negro school of Wise, will begin their exercises tonight at 8 o'clock. The commencement program will be held on next Friday, April 25, at 2 o'clock p. m.

MEDICAL AUXILIARY MEETS

The medical auxiliary of the Warren-Vance Medical society met in the home of Mrs. W. D. Rodgers, with Mrs. F. P. Hunter as joint hostess, Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. T. J. Holt, president, presided. A very interesting talk was made by Mrs. G. H. Macon, State president, on the work done at the State Sanatorium by this auxiliary.

A delicious ice course with salted nuts was served, carrying out the Easter motif. The Rodgers home was a profusion of dogwood, iris and tulips. The out of town guests were Mesdames Allen, Wheeler, Upchurch and Newell of Henderson. The next meeting will be with Mrs. H. Newell in Henderson.

Mrs. H. P. Reid, Mrs. Wilner Henay and Misses Helen Reid and Mabel Benson shopped in Henderson Tuesday.

Warren Negro Boys Win All The Prizes Offered in State

Three members of the vocational agriculture class of the Warren County Training School, negro school of Wise, not only have proved that there is profit in cotton, but also succeeded in winning every one of the three prizes offered to the negro schools of the State by the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Bureau for the best yield and records on two acres of cotton.

First prize of $35 was won by Clifton Woodward who grew 3172 pounds of seed cotton on two acres for which he received $208.64. Cost of production was $50.78 and his net profit from the two acres was $157.86.

Second prize of $18 was won by James Banks. He planted three acres instead of two and grew on this plot 3910 pounds of cotton which sold for $261.88. His cost was $80.60, and his profit $181.28.

Third prize of $10 went to Austin Woodward. He grew 2301 pounds on two acres for which he received $150.50. His cost was $36.90; and his profit $113.17.

J. L. Bolton is teacher of vocational agriculture at the Warren County Training School, and G. E. Cheek is principal.

Jack: I called on Mabel last night and I wasn't any more than inside the door before her mother asked me my intentions.

John: That must have been embarrassing.

Jack: Yes, but that's not the worst of it. Mabel called from upstairs and said, "That isn't the one, mother."

"What's the idea of that set of traffic lights over the mantel?" inquired the young man calling on daughter.

"It's father's idea," she explained. "The red stays on until 11:30; then he flashes on the amber, and at 12 the green. And, you know," she added, "father is a traffic cop."

This is the way to write a thoroughly angry business letter:

"Sir: My typist, being a lady, cannot take down what I think of you. I, being a gentleman, cannot write it. You, being neither, can guess it all."

Visitors were present

"Daddy, may I have a dime?" asked little Georgie.

Dad obliged, with a smile.

"This time you won't make me give it back after the company's gone, will you, Daddy?" was little Georgie's loud remark.

Heavy Stranger (returning to theatre between acts): Did I tread on your toes as we went out?

Seated Man (grimly): You did, sir.

Heavy Stranger (to wife): That's right, Matilda, this is our place.

It is said that a young lady by the name of Adaline Moore invented the postscript.—Inkhorn.

"You'd never think this street used to be a cowpath, would you?"

"Oh, I dunno; look at all the calves."

"That's what I call tough luck."

"What's that?"

"I've got a check for $40 and the only man in town who can identify me is the one I owe $50."

"I have a fine job now. I'm working in a shirt factory."

"Then how does it happen you are not working today?"

"Oh, we're making night shirts now."

Mr. Knutt: The doctor says I must quit smoking. One lung is nearly gone.

Mrs. Knutt: Oh, dear, John. Can't you hold out until we get enough coupons for that dining room rug?"

Mother: It is whispered that you and John aren't getting on!

"Nonsense! We did have some words and I shot him, but that's as far as our quarrel ever went."

Doctor: H'm! Severe headaches, bilious attacks, pains in the neck—what's your age, madam?

Patient (coolly): Twenty-four, doctor.

Doctor (continuing to write): H'm, loss of memory, too.

"I heard your son was an undertaker. I thought you said he was a physician."

"Not at all. I just said he followed the medical profession."

Kind Lady: I suppose you have seen better days.

Hobo Bill: I'll tell the pop-eyed world I have! One day last week I took in $12 and a quarter.
