

SAYS ROMANCE IS COMING BACK

Says Youth Realizes That Cynism Takes Intangible Beauty Out of Love

RETURNING TO NORMAL

NEW YORK, April 15.—You can take Helen Rowland's word for it, the flapper who scoffed at romance and her boy friend who wise-cracked at the idea of lasting love have passed out of the modern picture. Romance is coming back. Companionate marriage, part time marriages and free love theories are disappearing as the now grown-up war-time generation recovers from its post-war emotional fever.

"The boys, I believe, are the first to miss the delicate flavor of romance," she says in an interview in Smart Set magazine. "They grew tired of flapper manners and bored by that indelicacy that so many girls used to consider smart. So we are getting back to decency and good breeding and to normal state of affairs, where the man and woman who believe in love and marriage may live serenely and happily."

The post-war girl lost much of her power to attract men when she asserted her "right to be as free and as coarse as any man," says Miss Rowland. She took the mystery and the intangible beauty out of love and men, naturally, were the first to miss it.

"But that was a phase of post-war psychology," comments Miss Rowland. "It has happened after every great war. And it leads to rather a sad state of affairs."

She scoffs at the recently popular concept that love is largely a physical appetite with marriage offering the only appeasement sanctioned by an unjust society.

"It isn't all a matter of sex need," she declared in the Smart Set interview. "We need some one to share life with. It is human to crave the society of some one before whom we can talk freely about ourselves. We want a sympathetic companion of the opposite sex as to whom we may tell in perfect confidence all our joys and sorrows, all our little triumphs and all our failures. This is a most important aspect of married life."

"What does it matter what we achieve in the eyes of strangers? A very little achievement will do if we have an understanding mate who will be proud of us or sympathetic with us, according to our needs. I believe in the old-fashioned marriage, for better or for worse, for life. Of course, it is a help to know that two people who find they hate each other are not compelled to live together."

Debutante Wearied By $48,000 Party

Her debut cost $48,000, but all the famous debutante felt afterward was "tired." She confessed this to Isabel Leighton, well-known actress and playwright, who reveals details of the weary round of "exclusive" parties, in McCall's Magazine.

"Nature has equipped no girl with enough health to take her unimpaired through a successful first social season in a big city. One's own introduction to society, fraught though it may be with apprehension and excite, constitutes the smallest part of the physical wear and tear to which the debutante is subjected. It is the subsequent affairs, numbering some seasons upwards of a hundred parties, at which one must be seen if one's popularity is to remain unquestioned, that produce the wear, the real expression the 'debbie' wears so becomingly—a look which her sponsors call 'spirituelle' and her friends call plain haggard.

"Men, a certain very beautiful 'deb' told me, are getting almost impossible to please; and the younger they are the more they expect. When I asked her how many proposals she had chalked up to her credit at the season's end she remarked a little bitterly, 'Helen of Troy's face may have launched a thousand ships, but this Helen's mug can't start so much as one outboard motor.'

"There is, first of all, the list of the people you should invite if you would be smart. The social agency's charge for a glimpse at this treasured document is $500. So 'exclusive' is this collection of names that at one party this winter the check room girl discovered a loaded revolver in one young man's overcoat pocket, had two worn-out coats substituted for as many new ones, and three top hats unceremoniously rifled. One prominent society matron whose daughter made a highly successful bow last winter insists that she knows for a fact that it is possible for people of more than dubious position to buy their way on this list and that in her case she was able to prove to her own satisfaction at least that guests had been rung in at the last moment whose names had not been contracted for.

"The debut party music, of course, should be good but it is far more important that it be continuous. Certain orchestras are in greater demand, not only because of the personality of the leader. One orchestra leader, the girls tell me, gets very 'inty' with the guests. One of them told me that she was positively 'snooted' at her own dance the other evening; on the arm of a brand new beau she passed the friendly fiddler, and he greeted her with 'How's tricks, Mary?'; and in that awful instant her new conquest waned.

"And this was the least of the price she paid for her humiliation, for the evening's fun came to approximately $48,000. This figure included the cost of two orchestras, seven thousand dollars paid to two entertainers of stellar magnitude appearing in contemporary productions and reputed impossible to engage for supper performances, a four-course supper for everyone, wine for those who had supposedly reached the age of discretion and extravagant floral decorations in the numerous rooms used during the evening."

County Agent Britt Interested In Better Breeding of Horses

A thoroughbred stallion from the Army Remount Station at Lexington, Kentucky, is now stationed at Scotland Neck under the supervision of J. E. Condrey as agent, for the purpose of improving the type of horses in that section.

The stallion was secured through the efforts of J. B. Britt, county farm agent. When Mr Britt began his work in the county in 1928, he became interested in getting a good stallion in the county and secured the cooperation of J. E. Condrey, owner of Condreys Stables. After some correspondence with governmental authorities, a representative from the Army Remount Station at Lexington visited Scotland Neck and after a careful investigation agreed to send one of the thoroughbreds from the army stables.

This animal, "Double Cross" has been at Scotland Neck since last fall. He is the son of "Superman", a famous Kentucky race horse, and is an animal of outstanding quality, large bone and free of defects. Double Cross is of chestnut color, stands over 16 hands high and weighs 1130 pounds.

Mr. Britt says that 16 mares were bred to the stallion last fall and more than 30 will be bred this spring. A small charge is made for the service yet the colt is absolutely the property of the owner. He may keep or sell as he sees fit. The sole purpose in bringing the stallion to Halifax County was to improve the type of horses in that county. The number of horses has declined by 22,000 in North Carolina in the last three years and the quality of those left in not so good, says Mr. Britt.

It is felt that there are some farmers who would like to begin raising colts as a profitable side line to their other farming enterprises.

Coast Line Offers $250 In Prizes For Highest Yield Corn

Four cash prizes amounting to $250 are offered to corn growers in 51 eastern Carolina counties who grow the highest yields on five acres of land. The prize money is offered by the agricultural department of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and is open to farmers in the counties served by this road. Rules of the contest have been prepared by the Agricultural Extension Service of State College.

E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College, says there will be entries from each of the 31 counties and in some counties ten or more growers have already entered. Last year, the first prize of $100 was won by J. Lib Lee of Benson, Johnston County, who made 107 bushels of corn an acre on the five acres. Second prize of $75 went to Roy Lee Hayes, a 4-H club boy of Wilson County; third prize of $50 went to Jesse Murray, another club boy of Pender County, and fourth prize of $25 went to George W. Traak of New Hanover County. Those who plan to enter the contest must file entry by June 1, with the county farm agent, or vocational teacher where there is no agent. The rules of the contest have been slightly changed this year so as to make the chances of winning more favorable to the person who plants soybeans in his corn. Any farmer or member of his family may contest for the prizes.

Mr. Blair says those living in any of the following counties may enter: Anson, Bertie, Beaufort, Brunswick, Columbus, Craven, Cumberland, Duplin, Edgecombe, Franklin, Gates, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Johnston, Jones, Lee, Lenoir, Martin, Nash, New Hanover, Northampton, Onslow, Pamlico, Robeson, Sampson, Scotland, Wake, Washington, Wayne and Wilson.

"Things I Ate Hurt Me"

"I HAD a severe case of indigestion," says Mrs. Bell Buckheister, 7 River St., Piedmont, S. C. "So many things that I ate hurt me, I almost quit eating."

"I would burn in my chest. I had severe headache, and such a tight, smothering feeling. I would be obliged to eat a little, then it would hurt me. 'A friend said to me: 'Why don't you take Black-Draught?'"

"I was just too weak then to do my work. I began taking small doses after meals, and in just a few weeks I could eat anything I wanted to, then take my small dose of Black-Draught and feel fine. I soon regained my health and strength." Costs only 1 cent a dose.
