

PRISONERS CUT OUT JAIL LIGHTS

Locks Have Been Repaired
But Prisoners Continue
To Be Unruly

TRIO AGAIN IN MISCHIEF

By BIGNALL JONES
County officials have repaired the locks on the jail doors, and prisoners can no longer wander at will over the prison, but the bad boys in the local bastille just will not be in spite of all efforts of Jailer C. E. Lovell.
Monday night, locked in a cell and believed to have been placed beyond mischief, they beat a strip from a tub kept in their cell for bathing purposes since they tore up the water fixtures. They reached through the top of the cage, pulled down the light conduit enabling them to reach the electric light bulb. The piece of wash tub strip was pushed into the socket and the entire jail building was plunged into darkness from the resultant short-circuit.

A hurry-up call was sent up the street for Mr. Lovell who had now assumed the role of Night Policeman. The officer found an electrician who went down and placed in a fuse. Mr. Lovell and the fuse-fixer returned up the street. Again the lights went out. This time Wilson, the electric power man, left a bunch of fuses for the Jailer.

Mr. Lovell suspected that his prisoners had caused the damage. He warned them that if the lights went out again they could stay in the dark. The jail was plunged into darkness for the third time. Mr. Lovell disconnected a wire leading to their cell, placed another fuse in the block and had no more trouble. The next morning the bad prisoners confessed that they blew the fuses with a brick on the Jailer and on the other prisoners.

The public may be breathing easier since E. Hardy, Louis Junyers and Francis Shebaski, white men charged with robbing a filling station at Nodine, were placed in the county jail, but the troubles of Jailer Lovell have multiplied there.

The first evidence that they were not as other men came several weeks ago when they tore up the water fixtures in the jail. Several days later they tore a lock off a cell. Their next misbehavior was rattling up the tin plates in which Jailer Lovell carried them their food. They told him the reason for this was because they did not like the prison fare, and that they wanted beefsteak, like other jails had served them.

Monday they blew out the fuses. Now they have been separated. They are not quite so bad as formerly, the Jailer said. "They just holler and raise all the noise that they can."

For weeks the trio of bad men have tormented Jailer Lovell and worried county officials, who were unable to take drastic measures to curb their misbehavior because of humane prison laws passed for Jailer and guards less kindly disposed than is Jailer C. E. Lovell.

Their day of reckoning is coming for within a few weeks they come before a Superior Court judge at the January term of court when their action in the local jail will be taken into consideration in passing out sentences.

Theft Turns Stolen Cow Into Beef; Is In Warren Jail

Kate Perry, negro woman of near Warrenton, recovered part of her cow, but it was in the shape of beef, and Henry Hunter, negro, is in Warren jail awaiting trial at January term of Superior court on the charge of stealing the cow.

Kate Perry reported to Constable R. O. Snipes early Saturday morning that her cow was missing. Receiving word that Henry Hunter had been seen leading the animal, the officer went to his home, but found no trace of the missing cow.

Monday, accompanied by Constable Robert Pinnell, Constable Snipes returned to the Hunter home to see "if they were eating beef." Entering the house, the officers found a group gathered around a boiling pot of beef. Charged with the theft, Hunter is said to have admitted his guilt.

A search of the house revealed almost the whole carcass of the animal stored away in a large trunk.

Hunter was brought to Warrenton and given a preliminary hearing before Magistrate W. C. Ellington, who found probable cause and bound the negro to Superior court under $300 bond.

Arrested Here On Car Theft Charge

Herman Pait, 20-year-old white man, arrested here on Wednesday morning by Constable R. O. Snipes, accompanied the Chief of Police of Bladenboro to that city yesterday morning. Pait was arrested on a charge of stealing an automobile at Bladenboro on Tuesday night.

Pait brought Furman Calder, employe of the Warrenton Box and Lumber Co., to Warrenton early Wednesday morning, according to the story told local officers. Calder had been called to Bladenboro to attend a funeral. Pait offered to bring him home. He drove to Warrenton in a Chevrolet which it is charged he stole.

AN INDUSTRY CAME FROM AN INDIAN SWEEPER

Shrewd Ben Franklin received a gift of a whisk broom from India. Fastened to the whisps were a few seeds. He planted them—distributed the seeds from the first few crops—started the broom business in America.

Many To Find Work In Building Big Ship

MANCHESTER, Jan. 1.—Approximately 300,000 workers in many trades throughout the world will take part in the building of the proposed 60,000 ton British liner, expected to be the world's largest ship, according to British information contained in a Manchester press report received in the Department of Commerce.

The British information indicates that almost every industry in Great Britain will be able to employ more men during the two or three years which will be occupied in building and furnishing the giant liner.

Marble will be imported from Italy and Norway to be shaped into decorative pillars, floors, swimming pools, ordinary baths and lamp fittings, the British report states. Something like 300,000 pieces of silverware and 60,000 pieces of cutlery will be required, as well as 200,000 pieces of earthenware, china, glass, and similar items. Other materials are to be imported from many different countries, the report states.

It is reported that the British Southern Railway Company have agreed to build a new dock at Southampton of sufficient dimensions to accommodate the new steamer in October, and that the contract for the construction of the liner has been signed.

James J. Phelan of the investment and commission firm of Hornblower and Weeks today stated that better times are ahead in 1931.

"Personally," said Phelan, "I believe that we have during the last 60 days been turning—though admittedly slowly, still surely—into the road of better times. The signs pointing this way are hardly discernible, but should be quite apparent sometime during the first six months of the new year, perhaps by early April or May. That the movement will be in the right direction, various indices, by which we judge the future commercially, point.

"The two great obstacles, that for some time concerned action to a market degree has been working to eliminate, are those of fear and unemployment. Just so soon as we may be able to eliminate from the minds of the American people the unnecessary fear that seemingly has possessed a large part of our population for some time, and we get the unemployed who are willing to work, back to their jobs, our country as a whole will be well on the way to normal conditions."

H. Brigman of James H. Oliphant and Company, stated that "most of the forecasts of the new year will probably call for slow, but sure recovery and perhaps it is one of the infrequent occasions when the majority will be right. Something difficult to reckon with is the emotion."

Mr. Bob Watkins has returned to his home in Baltimore after spending some time here with his sister, Mrs. M. V. Fleming.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Lambert of Roanoke, Va., were in our town awhile Christmas day.

BUSINESS WORLD SHOWS CAUTION

Phophets Sound Note of Optimism, But Are Not Reckless in Predictions

FACTORS IN THIS PERIOD

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—At this time optimistic predictions on the New Year are in order, but with the false optimism of the beginning of 1930 in mind, business men are making very cautious statements as 1931 gets under way.

Notwithstanding their caution there is a note of optimism buried deeply. The majority cannot help but tinge their remarks with hope for the New Year. The consensus is that the present business depression has run longer than the ordinary backward cycle and precedent is due for a turn.

Factors in which this period differs from a year ago are:

1. Plentiful money at low rates for all purposes including business and the stock market. Rates were stiffer a year ago.

2. Complete deflation in commodities, stocks, bonds and industry. The deflation was only partial at the end of 1929.

3. Buyers have allowed stocks to dwindle where they are now operating on a hand to mouth basis so that any demand would immediately bring out orders to the manufacturers.

4. Comparisons in business will not have the disadvantage of being made against 1929, the peak year, as they did in 1930.

5. Elimination of the weaker elements in many lines of business through failure or merger. The field is open for many other mergers in 1931 which should strengthen many units.

During the first part of the year, as in the past, a seasonal pick-up should be discernible in the steel industry. There was rather too large an expansion a year ago and the subsequent decline was unrelenting.

If the uptrend in this giant industry continued into the second quarter, as many authorities are now predicting, the whole country would at once feel the influence of it. The spring should bring out buying of automobiles on a large scale. Railroads are now in the market for equipment that will keep steel mills busy for some time. Building is expected to advance. All of these lines work for the benefit of the steel industry.

Experts in various lines have pointed out repeatedly that a decline in business comes much more rapidly than an advance. Hence it is not to be expected that the gains will be of the sensational variety. Observers look for a quiet, irregular process, so far as industry is concerned.

The stock market still has many difficulties to overcome before it can set out on a real advance. It lacks the support of the small trader that will not come until a genuine and protracted rise is under way. It has not discounted fully very poor earnings reports that will come in the middle of this month. It is still faced with prospects of divided reductions by many companies whose earnings have been impaired.

James J. Phelan of the investment and commission firm of Hornblower and Weeks today stated that better times are ahead in 1931.

"Personally," said Phelan, "I believe that we have during the last 60 days been turning—though admittedly slowly, still surely—into the road of better times. The signs pointing this way are hardly discernible, but should be quite apparent sometime during the first six months of the new year, perhaps by early April or May. ## School Re-Opens; Christmas Season Unusually Quiet

The John C. ... re-opened ... Miss Carrie Broughton ... pupils and ... State Library ... during the Christmas holidays.

While faculty members enjoyed the holidays at their homes, the pupils of the local school joined with visitors from other places and students from preparatory schools and colleges in celebrating the holidays. The Christmas was unusually quiet in that there was little spending of money, but many dances and informal parties enlivened the two weeks. There has been much hunting, but, according to reports, the luck has not been as good as in past seasons.

There was no blowing of the fire siren and little ringing of church bells to welcome the new year. Remembering the experiences of other years, the town had placed guards around the boxes. The younger crowd contented itself with racing automobiles, with fire from Roman candles, and the noise of hundreds of pop-crackers.

The teachers have returned, school has reopened, many visitors have gone to their places of business, students are returning to their colleges, merchants are completing inventories, and next week the usual routine of business will hold sway, following a quiet but enjoyable Yuletide season.

Club Boy Produces 124.6 Bushels Of Corn To The Acre

James Lutz, 10-year old 4-H club boy of Newton, Catawba county, won first honors in the North Carolina corn club for the past season by producing 124.6 bushels of corn on his acre of land and clearing $159.35 above expenses on the project, announced L. R. Harrill, club leader at State College.

Young Lutz's corn was valued at $124.60, but he also grew 200 worth of hay and roughage on the acre and won $74 in premiums at local fairs. The expenses of growing the crop amounted to $85.35. As state prize winner, he will get a gold medal and a district prize of $25 donated by the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Educational Bureau.

Second place and a silver medal was awarded to Clarence Ives of Pasquotank county with a yield of 125 bushels an acre but with a net profit of only $84.70. Third place and a bronze medal went to Clyde Meads of Pasquotank county with a yield of 107 bushels and fourth place went to Easton Brickhouse, also of Pasquotank, with a yield of 113.8 bushels.

Mr. Harrill says the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Educational Bureau offered $350 in cash to district winners as well as the medals for the State winners. The money prizes were awarded in each of the five extension districts as follows: first prize, $25 second, $20; third, $15 and fourth, $10. Winners are as follows: Northeastern district, Clarence Ives, Clyde Meads, Easton Brickhouse and Alvin Sample, all of Pasquotank county. Southeastern District, Abraham Haddock, Daniel Kennedy, Henry Clay Harper, Lovet H. White all of Lenoir county. Piedmont district, James Lutz of Catawba, William Heavner of Catawba, James Alexander of Mecklenburg, and Gilbert Hutchens of Yadkin. Central District, Rufus Terry of Durham and Walker Thomas of Lee.
