WORDS
When you have left me, I think
Of all that I meant to say—Things that would give you delight—
Witty and tender and gay;
How you would rise to my mood—
Show that you understood.

Words are transient things;
Thoughts are too hidden for speech:
Probe them, they shrink in dismay;
Lure them, they fly from our reach;
Only our eyes convey,
Questioning, each to each.
The wonderful, beautiful things
That we meant to say.
—Enid Clay, in The English Review.
