

SAVE POTATOES, BUY BEAN SEED

Extension Horticulturist Offers Suggestion For Next Year's Planting

RELATES HIS REASONS

With low prices for Irish potatoes this year, the grower who intends to plant for market next season will get best results by saving a good supply of No. 1 potatoes for planting seed.

This is of particular importance to the mountain Irish potato grower who will sell some seed to early growers and who needs a good supply for his own use next spring.

Mr. H. R. Niswonger, extension horticulturist at State College, "The best way to get good seed is to go into the field and pick them out, planting the potatoes from each hill by themselves and selecting for seed such hills as have the largest number of No. 1 potatoes. It is also important for the tubers in these selected hills to have the characteristics of the variety. Put these seed potatoes in well drained storage. The man who has been planting No. 2's for the past few years should get a new supply of certified seed."

Those who intend to plant snap beans for market next season had best get a new supply of seed, particularly in the mountains. In that territory says Mr. Niswonger, the beans are badly infected with the anthracnose disease and the dried beans now on the stalks have these disease spores on the seed coat. This disease totally infected many fields this year which were planted with seed saved last year.

Yet there are some fields where the seed beans were secured from dry regions and did not have the trouble.

Mountain truck growers are also warned by Mr. Niswonger from selling worm-eaten cabbage this fall. Sell the inferior heads to local kraut makers or use them at home and select only the best and soundest weighing from 3 to 5 pounds for the market trade. When worm-eaten cabbage and large heads are put on the market, the price drops, he says.

Government Seeks To Protect U. S. Standard of Living

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Deeply disappointed over the swing toward lower wages, the Federal Government devoted anxious attention today to protecting the American standard of living.

The great concern of the President, it was disclosed at the White House, was that everything now be done to see that the more slender pay-check should not mean a permanent impairment of the standard of comfort and security which has been reared for the American worker.

In some high official quarters there was a disposition to feel that the steel and automotive industries had taken the lead toward a retrenchment policy just at the time when a recovery from depression was in sight. No one would predict the full effect, although there was every disposition to hope that the spread of the movement could be stopped.

One official in close touch with the industrial world pointed out that as the depression has gone forward, a steadily increasing amount of money had accumulated in savings banks.

He expressed an opinion that the time had about come when the wage would begin to spend, with an inevitable favorable effect on trade.

This official further outlined his views as follows:

The country has been in this depression about two years now. At first the trend was steadily downward. About the first of the year this stopped, and since then things have been bumping along on the bottom, up and down, but holding a fairly steady level. After the lowest point in August, a natural seasonal condition, there was every reason to believe the curve would take a steady upward trend.

Of course in all past depressions retrenchment has been immediate. In 1921 a great majority of concerns did their wage cutting in the first few months.

Buying, after all, is the crux of the entire situation.

State Treasurer O'Berry Wears Roosevelt Button

RALEIGH, Sept. 23.—State Treasurer Nathan O'Berry was the first person to display a button of the 1932 presidential campaign. Captain O'Berry wore on his coat Tuesday a badge admonishing all beholders to vote for Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, a leading contender for the Democratic nomination.

Charles M. Johnson, director of the Local Government Commission, was the second. Observing Captain O'Berry's display he commented, "I've had one of those in my desk drawer for a month. I didn't want to be the first, but I'm certainly going to be the second."

Legion to Consider The Question Of Legalizing Beer

DETROIT, Sept. 23.—The American Legion's unemployment commission today recommended that the Legion national convention give consideration to modification of the prohibition act to legalize beer.

The recommendation made by the commission said:

"Your National Employment Commission feels it to be the duty of the commission to present the following to the attention of this convention:

"That when it shall properly come before this convention, due consideration be given to modification of the Volstead Act to legalize real beer without conflict with the Constitution of the United States in the interest of furnishing added employment. Your commission believes that hundreds of thousands of jobs may be created through such action."

The commission's declaration on beer was received with a cheering demonstration. It was read by Howard F. Savage, of Chicago, Past National Commander of the Legion and chairman of the Unemployment Commission.

No action was taken on the brief report on beer, which was presented separately from the main body of the committee's report.

Mr. Savage pointed out that the commission was merely making its recommendation that the Legion give consideration to the beer proposal when it comes before the convention through regular channels.

The main body of the commission's report reviewed the work of the Legion's Washington conference on unemployment and made recommendations that the convention give consideration to advocacy of further restriction of immigration and to the promotion of public works as a means of unemployment relief. The commission also recommended that consideration be given by employers and workers to the five-day week and the six-hour day.

The commission said that it believed each community should, so far as possible, handle its own relief work. In concluding this portion of the report, Mr. Salvage appealed to the Legion members to co-operate in unemployment relief work with all existing agencies.

The declaration on beer was submitted after the main body of the report had been adopted without discussion.

The convention adopted a report of its junior baseball committee which recommended that the 1932 contest be conducted under practically the same rules as those of this year.

Legionnaires were warned today by a former comrade in arms, Administrator Frank Hines of Veteran's Affairs, not to risk public good will by demanding further payment on adjusted service certificates.

Speaking from the same rostrum from which President Hoover delivered a similar appeal on Monday, Hines said "one with his ear to the ground cannot have failed to hear an occasional rumble and criticism directed toward the American Legion because of its anticipated further demands in behalf of the ex-service men."

"We must not forget that the intangible asset of good will is the most valuable we can possibly possess," the former brigadier general said. "The Legion has had it unboundedly. It has it today. But it is a fickle thing and must be carefully guarded. Nothing can vanish more quickly."

Gandhi And Chaplin Form A Friendship

LONDON, Sept. 23.—Mahatma Gandhi, who leads millions toward liberty, and Charlie Chaplin, who makes millions laugh, today cherished a friendship of mutual understanding.

"A very charming man," said Gandhi of Chaplin.

"A most interesting figure," said Chaplin of Gandhi.

At Chaplin's behest they met for the first time yesterday in the East End home of one of the Indian leader's friends. Adults and children thronged around the house as the film comedian entered and loaded him down with bouquets of garden flowers.

Their talk was terminated by evening prayers. Gandhi and his English disciple, Mira Behn, knelt and clasped their hands as they intoned their supplications to the god of the Hindus. Chaplin sat quietly by, and when it was over he said he was glad he had come.

THIN SYRUP IS NEEDED

UTTICA, N. Y.—A home economics expert of Cornell university says that in canning fruit a thin syrup is needed for apples, pears and sweet berries; medium sirup for blackberries and sweet cherries and plums, and thick sirup for rhubarb, gooseberries, currants and other sour fruit.

Weekly Bible Lesson

By DR. J. T. GIBBS

"Have faith in God."—Mark 11:22.

Evolution presupposes involution. You cannot evolve out of a thing something that is not contained in that thing. So the lower orders of creation have a satisfied life of their own. The bees view their well-filled cells, the squirrels their hoard of acorns, and the ants the treasurers of the anthill—and they are doubtless satisfied. Our nature is so different from theirs. Man is proud of his wonderful achievements but not satisfied with them.

To the unreligious man this world is a dark riddle and there is no light beyond the grave. Men are not satisfied with piling up fortunes and building unmerited reputations, and without faith in a Hereafter the end of this life is dark and forbidding. In the strength of his own manhood one builds up a great business or distinguishes himself in professional life, but he is not satisfied and the little enjoyment he has is all in the span of a short life.

But man has in himself the key to a satisfactory life. Something out of which can be evolved the building here and now in his own heart that which shall be satisfying. When he labors in field or mill or office he evolves out of his own impress of God strength to be conscientious in all things and satisfied with doing his best.

There is need that God dwell in us. No man's intelligence is so perfect that life has no perplexities. No man's habits are so correct that his emotional nature is trained always to love the right and hate the wrong. And no man can claim a will so strong that it can guide every appetite and control every passion. When the storms of life are raging there is but one beacon that is always true, but one life line that never breaks, and only one sure haven of rest. The man who aspires to the highest and best must have faith in God that has a restraining and helpful influence.

Faith to be effective must be a living daily faith. It is of little value in the hour of temptation that yesterday one believed in God and that tomorrow he will believe again—as well might a great bridge stand on the girders that supported it yesterday but have been removed for repairs and will be replaced tomorrow. Faith means that you trust the promises of God as completely as the solid ground beneath your feet. At first it was hard to do this, but faith grows strong through years of trust and there comes the realization of a divine and satisfying companionship.

Faith in God makes better men and women than could otherwise be possible. It means that every man shall give account of himself to God. His secret sins shall ultimately be known to all. Even now God looks right down into his heart and sees what manner of man he is. And his fellowmen will know sometime, for the secrets of all hearts shall be made known. And so faith in God is an incentive to right living.

If I were to try ever so hard I might not be able to satisfy those who ask for verifiable knowledge of God. But not to believe in God has cost the world more than to believe that there is something of God in man that can evolve love for the best for all men. And all the literature of unbelieving men brings less comfort in death than the fourteenth chapter of John's gospel.

As a nation and as a world we are rich and troubled, wise and perplexed, but not satisfied and happy. Every one must make his choice between faith in God and the saying in his heart that there is no God. The man who has real faith in God may have the guidance and protection of Almighty God in the common affairs of life, and may know that his name is written in heaven. The man who says "There is no God" can do no more than build a mansion of prosperity on the shifting sands of human knowledge and human resolution and has no eternity of unchanging good.

Height of Efficiency

"That horse you sold me isn't all you cracked him up to be. He keeps stopping as if he were listening for something."

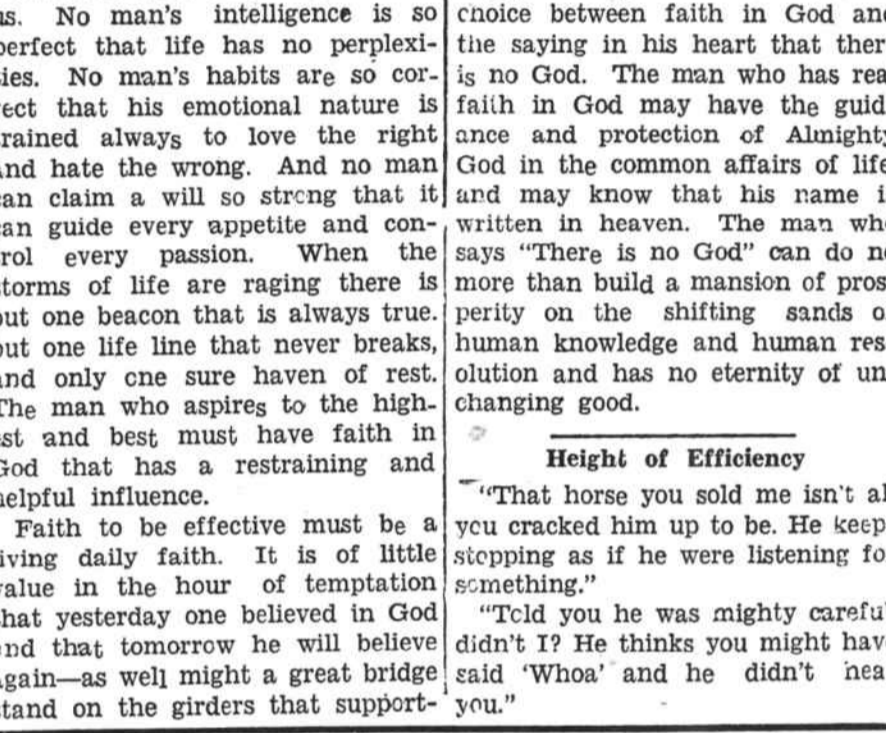

"Told you he was mighty careful, didn't I? He thinks you might have said 'Whoa' and he didn't near you."

Hunters Warned Of Dangers Caused By Burning Of Forests

The early opening of the squirrel and deer hunting season together with the hot dry weather of the past week has created a fire hazard that menaces the timber and wild life wealth of our State, and every hunter is urged to do his bit to prevent forest fires while in the woods, states L. A. Carter, district forester.

Records of the Department of Conservation and Development show that over 90 per cent of the forest fires in North Carolina are due to carelessness and of these about one-third are due to careless hunters and smokers, the forester pointed out.

"The hunter, who carelessly throws down a match without making sure it is out, or who discards burning cigarettes, cigars or knocks hot ashes from his pipe without regard to where he throws them or without putting them out is endangering the very sport in which he is engaged.

"The hunter who builds a fire to warm himself or his food without first removing all inflammable material from the area in which he builds his fire or who leaves such a fire without fully extinguishing it takes the chance of burning to destruction the game and cover and has violated the laws of his State.

"It is a recognized fact that every forest fire takes its toll of game birds and animals that many that are not burned to death in the fire suffer burns that lead to their death and others are so weakened that they become impotent and are unable to reproduce.

"It is also recognized that northern North Carolina has about

Ship Steams Away With a Bridegroom

BIRKENHEAD, England.—Frank Davies was married at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. At 5 his comrades invited him to a good-by party on board the steamship Nasmith, which was docked here. The party was so lively that at 8 o'clock in the evening "Mr. Newlywed" fell asleep. At 10 p. m. the Nasmith lifted anchor bound for the River Platte, South America. Next

France Laughs at Workings Of French Court-Martial

PARIS, Sept. 23.—All France is again laughing at the ridiculous workings of a French court-martial, Napoleon Klein, who was born in 1908 near Belfort, was called to the colors in 1928. He failed to make his appearance.

In 1929, having been declared an absentee, he was sentenced by a military court to a year's imprisonment.

It has since been discovered that Napoleon Klein died in 1909 at the age of four months.
