PRICE OF COTTON UP NEARLY $6.50

Market Soars Following Government Prediction Of A Short Crop

OPTIMISM IS EXPRESSED

Cotton prices have risen nearly $6.50 a bale following the Department of Agriculture's forecast on Monday of a 11,306,000 bale cotton crop for this year, 5,790,000 less than last season's production. This was nearly 1,000,000 bales less than any private estimate had been.

The market's reaction to the bullish news was to send cotton soaring $5 a bale. Profit taking resulted in slight losses on Tuesday, but the market came back strong on Wednesday with $1 a bale advances. Thursday the market closed 35 points up, giving net gain for the week of nearly $6.50, and put the price of cotton about $14 higher than at the lowest point of the market this year.

Aiding in the rise of cotton was that every teacher in the Warren- who had been coming to Warrenton a strong bull market that has ton school was under contract and as a rule stated that they did not within the past few days caused considerable rise in the price of stocks as well as in farm commodities. HAS FULL SESSION

Four Criminal Cases And One Civil Action Hold Attention On Monday

LOSES IN FIGHT, COURT

Four criminal indictments and one civil action held Recorder's court in session for a full day on Monday.

Listening to a long list of witnesses testify twice in assault charges, hearing a case of carrying a concealed weapon, and making preparation to take down the testimony in a murder charge occupied the morning session of court and the afternoon was consumed in a legal battle between Julius Banzet and John H. Kerr Jr. in the civil case of W. F. White of Norlina against the Clarence Wyatt Transfer Co. of Richmond.

June Williams lost out all around in a fight with Joe Perry. The two negroes engaged in an affray following a baseball game at Shocco Chapel church. Williams got the worse end of the fight when he was knocked down by a baseball bat in the hands of Perry and again in court when his attempt to convict self was convicted of assault and taxed with the costs in the action.

Edward Hayes, negro, plead guilty of carrying a concealed weapon and was sentenced to the roads for a period of six months.

The case of the State against A. D. Robinson, negro, charged with the murder of Marion (Bush) Carter, negro who was found dead several days ago near Littleton, was held up when Judge Taylor pointtaken down and that he was unable to do so in long-hand. Mrs. Joe Taylor was sent for and while waiting for her another case was tried. When the case was again called Julius Banzet, representing the defendant, said that he had discovered some new evidence and requested that the trial be postponed until From Road Gang August 15.
