

EVENTS OF INTEREST TO LITTLETON CITIZENS

LUCY PERRY, - - - - EDITOR

IN A LIBRARY

Sometimes when I have read a sort of tale Of our own times; some story writ to show How vile is humankind, how lecherous, low, How worse than any vermin—past the pale Of help or hope . . . all this in bleak detail, Page after page, I close the book the book and go In thought over the names of men I know: All kinds of men, both in and out of jail. No vermin these, not one of them, Instead, Struggling creatures like myself I find. Some are maimed, it may be; some are weak; Some dwarfed and twisted by the bitter wind Of adverse fate; but those of whom I've read I never find, no matter where I seek. —JAMES NORMAN BELL

BUSINESS BY BARTER

GAINING IN VOLUME

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Nation's Business cites the following examples of "business by barter."

Going through the daily newspapers one comes across items that take him back to the days his grandfather told him about when the farmer took his produce to the store and traded it for sugar, coffee, calico and other necessities.

In a country as full of money as ever, men are trading their work or their belongings for other men's goods. Here are some items:

In Chippewa, Mont., a farmer got five gallons of gasoline for two dozen eggs, five pounds of butter fat, and ten bushels of wheat.

At a shirt sleeve exchange in Oklahoma a tree surgeon reported that he was paid for five hours' work with ten cents in cash, a dinner and a variety of clothing.

He turned in the clothing in return for things that he could use.

The head of a stock exchange house had a customer offer him diamonds in lieu of cash with which to reopen an account.

In New England, school fees have recently been paid in potatoes.

Nineteen Edgecombe County tobacco growers will conduct field demonstrations with E. Y. Floyd, tobacco specialist at State College during the coming season.

Billswiggle—I suppose in these times you live in apprehensive trepidation, don't you? Dinklesproof—No; I live in the suburbs.

CARD OF THANKS

To my friends and entire community I wish to extend my sincere thanks for their great kindness and heroic work in trying to save my home. My most grateful appreciation for their sympathy in my misfortune.

V. F. HARRISON.
