R. F. C. Gardens

and summer months has resulted in the planting and cultivation of approximately 70,000 acres in the form of 135,000 individual family gardens, according to information made public today by Mrs. Thomas O'Berry, director of relief.

These gardens have already produced 2,729,047 quarts of food and a careful estimate reveals that approximately 2,775,000 additional will be harvested before the growing season ends. Charles A. Sheffield, assistant director of the agricultural extension division of State College, who has supervised these activities under the general direction of the relief office, states that the market value of this food is fully $5,000,000.

The food so produced will be consumed by the families cultivating these 135,000 gardens, thus reducing to the extent of its value the cost of food relief during the coming fall and winter.

"This gardening program has succeeded beyond our most optimistic predictions," said Mrs. O'Berry today in making the facts public. "Our idea in originating the movement was that in the main it would enable all relief families to produce themselves a sufficient amount of food for their own consumption. We also felt that at the same time these families, many of whom had not been trained in the art of cultivating the soil, would receive a practical vocational training. We also realized that destitute families would never receive the proper balanced diet of food unless it was produced. I am happy that all these objectives are being realized as a result of the program," Mrs. O'Berry said.

Mrs. O'Berry also stated that the farming program, because of its social and economic benefits, has been favorably received throughout the State. Public opinion has supported the movement unanimously, it was pointed out.

The planting, cultivation, harvesting and canning has been carried on by means of the active supervision of the relief administrators in the various counties, aided by the county farm and home demonstration agents. Mrs. O'Berry was high in her praise of the efforts of Mr. Sheffield for his general supervision and of the local persons who have assisted in making the program such a fine success. Every county in the state entered heartily into the program. Wake led all counties with a total of 5,051 individual gardens. Mecklenburg was second with 4600. Camden with 183 and the smallest number.

son and other members of his race when he saw two cars broken down on the side of the road. He testified that as he approached the vehicle he dropped his hand on the outside of the car but did not give a left turn signal. He said that he heard brakes crying back of him and then the car in which Wiggins and Hight were traveling struck his automobile as an attempt was made to pass him on his right.

Immediately after the accident, Williams stated, he got out of his car and went over to the wrecked automobile to offer his assistance. He said that he was greeted by "nigger what you mean by giving a left signal and then turning to the right," and one of the men appeared to be looking for something to strike him with. He testified that he left there and went to church.

On cross examination he admitted that he did not come back through Ridgeway on his way home, but stated that his failure to do so was due to the fact that he thought he might get into some kind of trouble.

Placed on the stand again, Wiggins stated that he said "nigger what you mean by giving a left signal and then turning to the right," but denied that there was anything about his movements and actions to indicate that he was making threats at Williams.

Judge Taylor dismissed the count of hit and run but found Williams guilty of reckless driving. He was given a four months road sentence, suspended upon the condition that he pay a $25 fine and court costs.

Julius Banzel was attorney for the defendant. Gholson & Gholson were attorneys for Wiggins.

George Hargrove, negro charged with abandonment, was found guilty of non support of a child. Prayer for judgment was continued upon payment of costs and upon the further condition that he pay the clerk of court 50 cents each Saturday for the support of the child.

Baldie Hawkins, negro, was given a months' road sentence on an assault charge.

John B. Lynch was found guilty of assault the automobile of Gus Powell. It was stated that Powell left the automobile at Lynch's home after he had been ordered away and when his car was called for it was minus window lights. Prayer for judgment was continued on the condition that Lynch pay a $25 fine and court costs.

SUMTER BANKER

1793. The next season, these selected seed were planted and the crop again carefully hand-picked for the five-lock bolls. Again and again the system was repeated.

The bolls are larger and fluffier than ordinary cotton and Rowland expects to gather between 40 and 50 bales from this type. Later, the pickers will cover the field again, picking the four-lock bolls from which Rowland expects 10 or 15 bales.

The pickers still are given a premium for taking only the select bolls. A careful watch is kept and if a picker takes any but a five-lock boll, that picker is immediately sent to pick in ordinary fields.

Recently Rowland made a test between the two types. He picked 75 bolls of each variety and found the five-lock bolls weighed 23.5 ounces to 17.5 ounces for the four lock boll. Generally 75 bolls weigh a pound.

"You can readily see," Rowland said, "the great practical advantage of the five-lock staple over the four-lock staple. Since the same amount of fertilizer must be used and the cotton given the same amount of work, a cotton which is blight-proof, early, and which yields 30 per cent more in weight would be of tremendous advantage to the grower in these times of keen competition."
