Florida Convicts Slayers of Woman Reared Here

Clearwater, Fla., Nov. 15 .- A circuit jury today convicted Ernest Wilmot of first degree murder with a recommendation for mercy and Clyde Hadnot of second degree murder in the slaying of Mrs. Myra Hayssen, 38-year-old practical nurse, who before her marriage was Miss Myra Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Green of Warrenton.

Mrs. Hayssen's body, the face battered and slashed, was found floating in a St. Petersburg lake last September 15. The two youths admitted they were with her on the night before, but both denied implication in her death.

The jury deliberated more than two hours last night and all of this morning before reaching a verdict.

Immediately defense attorneys entered motions for new trial and Judge John U. Bird deferred sentence until the motions are considered next Monday. Under the Florida law, Wilmot's conviction means life imprisonment, and Hadnot may be given 20 years to life.

To me and to his neighbors and friends he was always kind and hospitable. When I moved to my home here his was the first hand extended to me in welcome, and with that hand he brought food for our supper.

Mr. Davis was a man who did not spend his time in idleness, and in consequence he provided well for his family, and gave each of them an education, and to the Army and Navy four fine sons, one of whom, Edward Davis, heroically pleaded for the lives of his comrades being shelled by a German submarine, and was shot for his valor.

Mr. Davis' home was a hospitable home; his kindred, his friends and the Ministers of the Gospel always found it so. He was greatly blessed in his marriage to Miss Hannah Barham—a lady of culture, refinement and acknowledged intellectuality. She is a great-granddaughter of Nathaniel Macon, and connected with many of the old families of Warren and Franklin counties. Their married life was one of devotion, and I feel as the Poet who said:
