States Youth Needs Definite Projects

The farm boy or girl who has definite projects to look after will gain a great deal of valuable experience, take a greater interest in farm life, and develop finer traits of character, said Dr. R. Y. Winters, director of the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station.

Now that schools and colleges have closed and thousands of boys and girls are on the farm for the summer, he continued, the assignment of projects to these young people will help solve a difficult problem.

"We sometimes lose sight of the opportunities afforded on the farm for training young people and developing in them a sense of responsibility," Dr. Winters stated. "Often parents do not have enough patience to train their children as they should. The children, in turn, lose interest in the farm and home, often preferring to work elsewhere, even though the jobs are hard and the pay small.

"But this summer the possibilities for outside employment are not so good, and parents have an excellent opportunity to give their children tasks to do, or projects to carry out, that will make them feel that they are accomplishing something worth while."

Projects in boys and girls 4-H club work provide a good medium for training young people and keeping their enthusiasm alive, Dr. Winters continued.

The older the boy or girl, the greater the responsibility he is capable of assuming. If the interest of older children is to be held they must be given duties worthy of their ability, Dr. Withers said. They like to study and make plans, to feel that they are on their own.

County farm and home agents and vocational teachers will be glad to advise parents about projects for young people, he added.

As farmers become familiar with the new conservation program they are glad to sign work sheets and to cooperate fully, says T. J. W. Broom, Union County farm agent. Madison County farmers say that soybeans planted in rows will produce more hay and beans per acre than when broadcast.
