Mrs. Bobbitt Pays Tribute To Friend

By MRS. PEARL W. BOBBITT

Mrs. Sallie W. Skinner died November 7th, 1936, at the age of one more than the three-score years and ten. She died suddenly of heart failure, having suffered for more than a year with spells of heart trouble, and her death, while not a surprise, was a great shock to her loved ones.

She leaves two sons and a host of friends to mourn their loss. To the writer she was a mother for the two decades since her own mother went to Heaven and a friend always that merited deepest devotion. We loved each other.

IN MEMORIAM

I had a dear friend, and she left me
When the day was sad, and drear and grey;

Her going so sadly bereft me I've hardly felt since she went away;

Perhaps music has its same sweet sound, Maybe night still spreads soft wings of love,

Possibly gay, bright sunlight has found Some sweet flower-cup to beam above,

Probably the other planets still gaze
On Mother Earth as in years of yore;

But I can't feel the pulse of the days,
Because my heart is so achingly sore.

I'm sure that somewhere beyond times realms
That dear friend in perfect peace abides;

He who guided her barge, holds
my helm,
And pilots me safe whate'er be-tides.

And so, tho' my days be lonely,
long,
And tho' my sad heart no feeling know, Triumphant Faith will sing its sweet song,
And our God His saving grace will show.

Everyday Cooking Miracles

BY VIRGINIA FRANCIS

Home-made candies just belong at holiday time, don't they? Not only do we like to nibble on these sweet, nut-filled dainties at times when we're not eating turkey, or hanging around the cookie jar, but we delight in the gay commotion and activity connected with candy making, too. Young Junior says maintain the heat you choose and distribute it evenly over the bottom of the pan. Wouldn't you agree that candy making, in this modern style, helps to stir up that gay holiday spirit?

Oh, yes, opera creams! Now there's a candy for you whose delicate caramel flavor and smooth, Delicious candies for the holidays, such as these tempting light opera creams are easy to prepare on the modern electric range.

it's fun to watch out for the "broken" and "off-size" pieces, also to wait his turn to lick the pan.

Wouldn't it be grand to be able to make delicious creamy candies without first having to seek the patronage of "old lady luck"? Well, it is grand, because candy making is no longer "tricky" business; it is a science with one of the new automatic electric ranges. Now you have controlled cooking temperature which, after all, is a necessity if smooth, melt-in-your-mouth candies are what you are wanting.

No Danger of Burning

Also you can make candies without having to devote your individual attention to the sweet, syrupy liquid bubbling away on the range. Stop and pare the potatoes for lunch if you like—the candy won't burn.

Light operas (I'll give you my favorite recipe in a minute), fudge, and caramels belong to that class of home-made confections which rely upon controlled cooking temperatures for good results, and since these candies contain cream, milk, and other scorchable ingredients, it's a pleasure to know that they won't burn "behind your back." The surface heat units of the modern electric range not only furnish varied degrees of heat; they also creamy texture are developed by low, slow cooking. Their goodness accented by crunchy pecan meats, will be acclaimed whether they are quietly munched between the acts of "Madame Butterfly" or fresh from the pan in which they were cooked.

Light Opera Creams

(Makes 1 1/2 lbs. Candy)

2 cups sugar 3/4 tsp. salt
3/4 cup cream 1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup milk extract
1 tbs. light 1 cup pecan nut corn syrup meats (cut fine)

Place sugar, cream, milk, corn syrup, and salt in saucepan. Cook on Low Heat, stirring occasionally, to the soft ball stage (236°).

Remove from electric heat unit and cool, without stirring, until mixture is lukewarm (110°). Then add vanilla extract and beat until candy becomes creamy. Add nut meats and drop by spoonfuls on a greased platter or on the smooth working top of the electric range.

Did you get that? Drop the candy on the range to harden? Yes, it's so! The smooth, enameled working top of the electric range is not only conveniently large enough to accommodate these delicious confections, but it is always spotlessly clean, because it is so easy to keep clean!
