

THIS WEEK In Washington

Washington, Nov. 3. — Official Washington is afflicted with a bad case of the Scares.

There is a very definite War Scare, which has grown stronger since the recent European developments. There is a Red Scare which is being taken more seriously than ever before. And there is a Spy Scare which seems to have more immediate tangle basis in fact than any of the others.

Much concern is felt in the State Department over the close relations between Mexico and Germany. Mexico has confiscated American-owned oil wells and is selling their product to Germany at bargain prices. Those with long memories recall Germany's proposal to Mexico in the World War, when the project of regaining the territory lost to the United States in the Mexican War was held out as a bait to induce Mexico to join Germany in the war against England and France.

It was the disclosure of that German scheme, as much as anything else, that forced the United States into that war.

The State Department feels rather happy than otherwise about the diplomatic rupture between Germany and Brazil. The belief that the new Government of Brazil was secretly allied with the Nazi movement has been dispelled by recent events. Much concern is felt, however, by the extent of German and Italian propaganda being broadcast to the peoples of the South American countries, much of it distinctly hostile to the United States.

A good deal of that radio-borne propaganda is printed in South American newspapers as news. This has led to revival of the project of a Federal propaganda bureau, with radio stations powerful enough to reach the entire southern hemisphere, to offset and counteract the effects of the broadcasts from Europe.

Jitters Heightened

All of the warlike jitters are heightened by the recent disclosures that foreign nations, especially Germany, have been paying spies to obtain secret information about our army, navy, air forces and coast defenses. How much has been obtained that would be of real value to a foreign enemy is questionable.

The important thing, as Washington sees it, is that evidence has been produced to prove that other nations regard the United States as a possible future enemy and are trying by the usual methods of espionage to find out our weakest spots.

The capture of four spies in the Canal Zone, and the disclosures in the trial of German spies in New York, in which one of them made a full confession, have come as a climax to numerous reports which the State Department has of Japanese navy officers disguised as fishermen taking photographs at the naval base at San Diego and in the Canal Zone, of numerous natives of other aggressor nations whose activities have been at least suspicious.

Not all of the facts upon which the Spy Scare is based have been made public, but enough has been disclosed to furnish backing for the President's recent statement that a special secret service organization should be set up, whose business it would be to ferret out espionage by foreign nations in this county. None of the Governments' police organizations is now equipped or authorized to perform that service effectively.

More Than a Bogyman

Such an organization of secret operatives would, doubtless, turn its attention to the Communists. The Red Scare is held here to be something more than a bogyman.

The disclosures of Communist activities in labor organizations and to some extent in political bodies, which have been brought out at the hearing of the Dies Committee to investigate un-American activities, have been of a nature to make many persons take seriously what they formerly thought to be a bug-aboo.

It is the official Washington belief that Soviet Russia, far from abandoning its early avowed purpose of turning the whole world Communist, is working to that end more diligently than ever. The movement is difficult to combat openly, because it is carried on in secret by persons who do not avow themselves as Communists and who deny any purpose of overthrowing the American Government.

Since the principles of the Communist party are asserted to be based upon the overthrow of all existing governments, the question whether an avowed Communist who is not a citizen of the United States should be allowed to enter or remain in this country is up for of-

Expedition Returns From Arctic

NEWARK, N. J. . . . Deputy Mayor William Fox of Newark greets Clifford J. Springtime Luncheon with Kraft Dinner

An attractive springtime luncheon, suitable for party or family supper is made by combining Kraft Dinner, with peas and broiled mushrooms. This whole-meal-in-itself is as economical as it is attractive—and requires only a few moments in the making. Kraft Dinner is prepared in nine minutes, placed on a platter, and the peas and mushrooms added, just before serving. In spite of its festive appearance, this party dish is surprisingly economical to serve—just right for luncheon or evening occasions.

Official consideration.

Await Court Ruling

The answer probably will not be definite until the Supreme Court acts on a case which has been brought before it from a lower court, which held that an alien Communist named Severn could be deported solely because of his acknowledged Communist affiliations. Meantime an English radical, John Strachey, who obtained an American passport by stating to the Embassy in London that he was not a Communist, has been detained at Ellis Island by order of the State Department, which cancelled his passport visa after he had sailed, on receipt of cabled information that the man had positively enrolled as a member of the Communist party in England.

Since each state of the Union makes its own definition of citizenship, a majority of the states have admitted the Communist party to equal rights with other parties, including a place on the official ballot. That vigorous efforts to outlaw the Communist party will be made when Congress meets is more than probable. That such a move would have any effect upon Communist propaganda is regarded as improbable.

Mileage Hints

By J. F. Winchester Supervisor of Motor Vehicle Equipment, Esso Marketers

WHEN a motorist knows that the combustion chamber of his car generates a heat of 3,000 degrees F., he must have a great deal of respect for the efficiency of the cooling system which makes the operation of his car possible. Further, he should realize the importance of good care of that system and promptly remedy any damage or wear which impairs the efficiency of the system.

Of course, all of the heat generated by combustion is not dissipated through the cooling system. The upper cylinder wall, for instance, may reach a maximum temperature of 600 degrees F. and the lower cylinder wall 400 degree F. The temperature in the crankcase is normally about 200 degrees F.

All this means that the thin film of motor oil which keeps metal from rubbing on metal and protects the moving parts from wear must withstand a temperature about twice as great as that required to boil water. It is not easy to realize when one sees fresh oil poured into the crankcase that that substance, which seems fluid enough already, will be subjected to the thinning action of such high heat, and, in spite of the thinning, still stands up between the moving metal parts. And it must not vaporize to a measurable extent nor coke under this high heat.

Considering these conditions, it would seem wise to buy oil of known high quality and not to run it too many miles.

N. C. Farmers Urged To Raise Work Stock

Comercially-bred horses, and mules cost more now than at any time since the World War, and their cost will probably continue to rise for the next ten years, says Fred M. Haig, professor of animal husbandry at State College. This is because the death losses of horses and mules each year in the United States is more than one million head, and for the past five years the production of colts has been only 600,000 a year.

In North Carolina the number of horses and mules has decreased from 421,000 in 1925 to 370,000 at the present time. This is a serious situation, but there is a solution to it, Haig says. His suggestion is this:

Estimating the cost of animals at $200 per head, our farmers must spend $1,000,000 each year to buy work stock replacements. This drain upon the agriculture of the state can be avoided by raising work stock on our farms.

Much land has been released from cultivation by reduction of acreage heretofore planted in cotton and tobacco. This land could be profitably utilized in the production of feed crops for work animals. It requires Salad Bowls Bring the Garden to the Table!

There was a time when every hostess worthy of the name tried to disguise the natural beauty of her garden vegetables when they came to the table. Cut and diced, and smothered in all sorts of strange ways, they were never allowed full expression of their own naturally graceful and delicious selves.

Today all that is changed, and the handsomest of our salads are the most natural appearing. The salad bowl, offering us a wide variety of the best the garden has to offer, is perhaps the happiest expression of this simple beauty in salad-making. In the salad bowl, with its ample surface, we find green beans, radish carrots, blushing tomatoes, tender peas, spicy radishes and floweret of raw cauliflower mingling in a happy community of garden-goodness. Each of these garden favorites may be placed in a separate nest of crisp lettuce—or all of the ingredients may be tossed lightly together in a bowl garnished with watercress. But anyone who has ever prepared or tasted a salad bowl agrees that this particular kind of salad has a charm all its own.

There are no hard and fast rules about the proper making or arrangement for a salad bowl. Let the imagination, and the wealth of the garden, decide. But an excellent rule to remember is that the choice of dressing for these fresh spring beauties is all-important. To enhance each separate flavor of the vegetables, and dress the salad as it properly deserves, "Miracle Whip" Salad dressing is the ideal choice. Because it is neither too sharp nor too mild, but blends with a wide variety of flavors, it is perfectly suited to the vegetable salad. Made with pure vinegar, choice eggs, oil and a happy blend of spices, "Miracle Whip" combines the best features of both old-fashioned boiled dressing and mayonnaise.

A separate bowl of "Miracle Whip" served beside the heaping salad bowl is your assurance of the success of this most popular member of the salad family.

approximately four acres to produce the necessary feed for a horse or mule for one year.

The production of one or two colts on the farm is strictly a non-cash cost, provided the animals are raised as a sideline to the general system of farming. No farmer can afford to keep mares in idleness solely for the production of horse or mule colts. The mare must be required to do her share of the work on the farm and in addition, produce a colt each year.
