A milk route for the handling of manufacturing grade milk may be established in Warren County.

Frank W. Reams, county agent, said yesterday that a survey is being made among Warren County farmers to determine whether or not enough of this type milk could be produced in this county to justify the establishment of milk routes in the county.

This week representatives of the White House Milk Division of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, Inc. were in the county in the interest of developing a milk route in this area to serve its plant in South Boston, Va. They said they needed the milk and that there is little likelihood of an overproduction occurring for many years to come. They said whether the routes will be established in Warren County would depend upon the amount of interest shown by our farmers. While in Warren, the milk company representatives contacted the white and Negro county agents, and asks that farmers interested in the route contact these representatives. The representatives said that little money is required to enter into the production of milk for manufacturing purposes. Coolers can probably be purchased from A-grade dairymen who have gone to bulk tanks, one of the representatives said.

Reams said that whether or not the routes would be established would depend on the interest shown by farmers. He said that he felt that establishments of the routes would be a good thing for farmers whose cash crop allotments have been cut, and that they would be a good thing for the economy of the county.
