Astronaut Cooper Has A Long Wait

CAPE CANAVERAL—U. S. astronaut L. Gordon Cooper, Jr., who had hoped his years of waiting for a flight into space would end April 2, will have to extend his patience by another two weeks or so.

The federal space agency has decided to "slip" Cooper's planned 22-orbit voyage around earth to mid- or late-April—possibly April 16 or 23.

The April 2 firing date was canceled when engineers discovered what was described as a "minor but time-consuming" problem in the rocket—a modified Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile—that will shoot the slender Air Force major into orbit.

Informed sources said the problem was centered in an electrical system.

The silver booster rocket was to have been flown Monday from the General Dynamics astronautics plant at San Diego, Calif., to Cape Canaveral.

But the trouble was discovered before the Atlas left, and it was decided to keep it here until the situation was cleared up.

A Bargain

Four young officers in China had a Chinese servant upon whom they played all kinds of tricks. One night they nailed his shoes to the floor. The next morning without a word of retaliation, he brought in their coffee. Next day they put sand in his bed. The next morning he served their coffee smiling blandly, with no resentment in his attitude. So they decided to play no more tricks on such a good fellow, and told him so. "No more nailee shoes to floor?" "No." "No more puttee sand in bed?" "No." "Velly well, no more spittee in the coffee."

In That Case

The expectant mother was showing the guests the m clothes she had bought for the new arrival. She displayed pink booties, pink nightgowns, pink panties and dozens of pink dresses. Queried a male guest: "But what happens if the baby is a boy?" Replied the father-to-be grimly: "Then he'll wear the dresses and I'll teach him to fight."
