DEPRESSED

During recent months, Warren County was declared a Depressed County, with some over 6% of its people unemployed. We are now in an improved status. This dirty sounding word has been deleted and we are now normal Warren County. Our percentage of unemployed is at a low ebb. Some predictors state the situation has not improved to that extent and feel the unemployed have departed Warren County.

It is easy to become pessimistic but we do have some things over which we can feel proud. The cash income in Warren County during 1962 was the highest on record. I do admit we do have a few worry wart items such as the high cost of operations. As someone recently said, "Do you remember when a coke was 5c?" Another drink customer popped up and said, "Do you remember when they were 7c?" Several days ago I was jokingly teasing a complaining dairyman that he had thousands of dollars income per month and should have plenty of pocket change. He came back with a snarl, and pointed to a tractor plow point stating, "They acted like there was gold in the blankety-blank thing." That about explains it, folks—we must get more or spend less so some will be left for a pair of baby shoes.

July 21-27, won't be observed as a joyous celebration. Instead, it should serve as a grim reminder that farming is the third most hazardous occupation. Only mining and construction have higher death rates.

Actually, the accident death rate on farms is higher than the national average. In 1961, when the national rate dropped to an all-time low of 50.4 deaths per 100,000 population, the farm average rose to 58.8. That year accidents took the lives of 8,700 farm residents.

What are some of the basic reasons? Despite improved equipment, better farming techniques, and greater emphasis on agricultural training in high schools and colleges, farming lags behind a work safety. Work accidents are second motor vehicle and the farm population.

While many incidents have elaborate safety measures and trained personnel to administer safety programs, a farmer operates for the most part on his own. In industries, employees' mistakes are noticed and corrected. The farmer doesn't have the benefit of this expert safety supervision.

Farm Fires Can be Prevented

Anyone who has experienced or witnessed a destructive fire on a farm knows its tragedy and ruin. Fires in rural areas are extremely dangerous even though we do have some adequate fire-fighting equipment. Fire is easy to prevent but hard to stop. The National Safety Council lists these eight causes for most farm fires: 1. Defective chimneys; 2. Chimney sparks on combustible roofs; 3. Un safe stove and furnace installations; 4. Inadequate lightning protection; 5. Improper use of electricity; 6. Spontaneous ignition; 7. Misuse of gasoline and kerosene; 8. Carelessness with matches.

What to do about fire protection

Newly stored hay should be inspected daily for several weeks for overheating which could cause spontaneous ignition.

Electric lights in barns should be protected with glass guards to prevent hay and dust from coming in contact with them.

Field burning should be discouraged. If this is done, a fire break at least six feet wide should be plowed around the field.

Every member of the farm family should know how to summon the local fire department without delay. Its telephone number should be posted prominently near the telephone. Adult members should cooperate in helping provide community fire protection.

A pond within pumping distance of farm buildings provides a good emergency water supply. If a pond is impractical, build an emergency cistern of at least 3,000 gallon capacity. Stock tanks and home swimming pools are other sources of water in a fire emergency. Buckets of sand can be used to smother small blazes before they get out of control.

One of the miracles of the age is the low number of all type accidents including traffic accidents when considering the potential source of such incidents. Take a look at the picture above. Cars going every way, people walking in the street and it all adds up to a miracle. We must practice all the safety first possible and with all this the hospital and undertaker will have adequate business.

CUT HAY EARLY

Recently learned of a new and highly recommended practice on the James C. Harris farm, Inez. Mr. Harris was cutting his excellent lespedeza July 16. Records show that early cut hay is much more nutritious and in the case of early cut lespedeza you have a chance of a second crop, either for hay, grazing or reseeding. How can you lose?

itan Cafe here for more than 20 years.

Papageorge was a public spirited citizen, active in town affairs, a member of local civic clubs, and a communicant of the Episcopal Church. Friendly and loving people he made many friends while here. Some ten years ago he returned to Greece where he and his wife live with their daughter.

John said that Papageorge, who appeared to be in good health, spoke of his years in Warrenton and expressed a desire to return to Warrenton for a visit. He asked about many persons in the town and showed that his interest in the town and people has not waned.

In a letter to Mitchell a few days ago, Papageorge again spoke of the pleasure brought to him by his visit, and asked that his regards be given to a large number of Warrenton persons in particular, and to others that he failed to mention. In this letter he again expressed as his great hope that he might soon visit Warrenton.

Steve made many friends while here and they will be glad to know he is well and enjoying life.
