

Crop Measurement Is Finished In County

Initial measurement of crops and land uses in Warren County has been completed and all operators notified of their measured acreage, T. E. Watson, ASCS office manager, said yesterday.

"The job this year was the largest ever in the county, since in addition to measuring the acreage of cotton, tobacco, peanuts and wheat, over 1100 farms diverted land under the 1963 feed grain and wheat stabilization programs and the acreage of feed grain and the acreage diverted were measured on these farms," Watson explained. "In addition there are 71 farms in the county participating in the conservation reserve phase of the soil bank program. All soil bank base crops on these farms were measured in addition to the allotment crops grown."

Watson said that it is estimated that in the 2,425 farms in the county, 26,900 acres of crops and land uses were measured during the performance season. He said that about 400 percent of the farms in the county received excess notices after initial measurement was made which indicated one of more of the following were not complied with: (1) Too much tobacco, (2) Too much cotton, (3) Excess peanuts, (4) Too much corn—feed grain farms, (5) Too much wheat, (6) Not enough diverted acreage, (7) Too much diverted acreage (This required no action on the part of the producer unless he desired to harvest a crop from or graze the diverted acreage).

"To date practically all farm operators have requested remeasurement or disposition of excess acreage and this work will all be completed within a few days," Watson said.

During the peak of the performance season, 24 reporters were employed and six temporary employees were used in the county office.

Watson said that the county committee, office manager, and office personnel wish to thank the people of Warren County for their full cooperation in the performance work. The operation, he said, though large, ran very smoothly.

Boat Operators Must Have Jackets, Light

Operators of small boats in Warren County must provide life preservers for each person aboard their boat when in operation or risk prosecution under a new state law, Wildlife Protector Alton D. Pridden said this week.

Pridgen said the new law also requires night boat operators to have either a white light mounted on the boat stern or a serviceable flashlight aboard to warn off other boats.

While ten Tar Heel counties were exempted from the law, the new law applies to Warren and neighboring counties. Pridden said the state's wildlife protectors plan to enforce the state's boating safety laws both "efficiently and impartially."

Shoes Will Contain Identification Label

Something new has been added to shoe shopping this season—labels. This is a result of "guide rules" by the Federal Trade Commission which say that shoes whose major parts are made of a material which imitates leather, but is not actually leather, should be clearly identified for the consumer's benefit.

Miss Martha Ann Hurt, clothing specialist for the Agricultural Extension Service at N. C. State, says that the parts of a shoe which are traditionally leather and which are covered by the new F. T. C. "shoe guides" include: the leather uppers (top and sides of the shoe), leather lining (smooth or suede), the leather inner sole and the leather outer sole.

Although shoes which are all-leather need not be labeled, many quality manufacturers will continue the practice of stamping their footwear "Genuine Leather," Miss Hurt says that they have found that customers desire this information when they select new shoes for children—or for themselves.

You will find the new content information on shoes in several different forms. Some shoes will carry a separate hang tag, others will have the information printed on the lining of the shoe, while others will have a tag pasted to the sole. Look for the label—it will help you be sure that you are getting your money's worth.
