I am writing this one the eve of the New Year, 1964. I don't make resolutions but I plan to be kind to my neighbors and hope that you will, too. If enough of us do this, the New Year will be happy, bright and prosperous. This is the least we can do, but we are so prone to overlook the everyday little things. No one is ever too young or too old to appreciate a pat on the back.

"When I was a boy I could go to the woods and pick up all the chestnuts I wanted. We boiled them, roasted them, ate them raw and used them in 'stuffing' for turkeys and chickens. Is there any chance that we will ever have the opportunity to do this again?"

This query makes me real homesick for I could do the same thing. However, the chances for a come-back of the native chestnut look indeed slim. We still have the ghostly, mute reminders in our woodlands but so far no native chestnuts resistant to the blight, which desstroyed them, have been developed. Some sprouts from diseased trees that have survived long enough to bear a few nuts, seem to be doomed to follow the path of their ancestors.

We do have the Asiatic species. Of these the Chinese types seem to be superior to other Asiatic chestnuts. Your nurseryman can supply you needs if you want to try them.

For the lower Piedmont and eastern Carolina readers, I want to remind you about the importance of fertilizing your pecan trees. We had a good crop last year but many were small. Then, too, an annual application of fertilizer will promote annual bearing of the trees. Neglected trees have a tendency to bear every other year because they cannot store enough food in the "on" year to produce the "off" year unless you feed them.

Have your soil tested and, if necessary, add enough dolomitic limestone to raise the pH to 6.0. In late February or early March, fertilize the trees with an 8-8-8 mixture. Use about 3 lbs. per inch of tree diameter measured about 1 ft. above the ground level. If your trees can be cultivated, the fertilizer should be worked in the soil.

If trees are growing in your yard, the fertilizer should be placed deep. Use a crow bar, or the axle of a car, to make the holes. Stagger the holes around the tree just under the drip of the branches. Divide the amount of fertilizer needed for the tree and place in the holes, uniformly, around the trees.

ABOUT THIS QUESTION:
"I fell for this cut-rate auto insurance from a direct-writing insurance company with no independent local agent. When I had a collision loss, I found their adjuster trying to cut every corner on repairs to save the company money. Does anyone really think he saves money when he by-passes his independent local insurance agent?"
