

LITTLETON FACTORY WHICH OPENS MONDAY

Factory To Begin Operation At Littleton Monday Morning

Littleton—Littleton's new industry, Jay Too, Inc., will begin its sewing operation Monday morning, Carl Hoag, plant manager, announced this week. Manufacturing will get underway with 25 employees. The work day will begin at 7:30 a. m. and end at 4 p. m., Hoag said. Eventually this subsidiary plant of Jayvee Brand, Inc., will employ 250 persons, the same number that is employed by the home plant in Lake Oswego, Ore.

The company will manufacture many styles of infant wear carrying the brand name of Candee. These garments will be gift packaged for sale. Hoag came to Littleton in June when the formal announcement of the new industry was made. Since that time, he has been busy getting the final phase of the basic building completed to company specifications, ordering machinery and supplies, and supervising the installation of the machinery.

Jayvee Brand, Inc., was incorporated in Portland, Ore., in 1946, with John G. Emory as its president. It was through the idea of an infant gift package and Emory's determination that the company expanded and located at Littleton. In 1960 the company moved to Lake Oswego where infant gift sets and plastic baby pants are now manufactured. During the years 1946 to 1957, the company manufactured plastic rain coats and wool sport shirts.

Voters To Decide Fate Of Bond Issue Tuesday

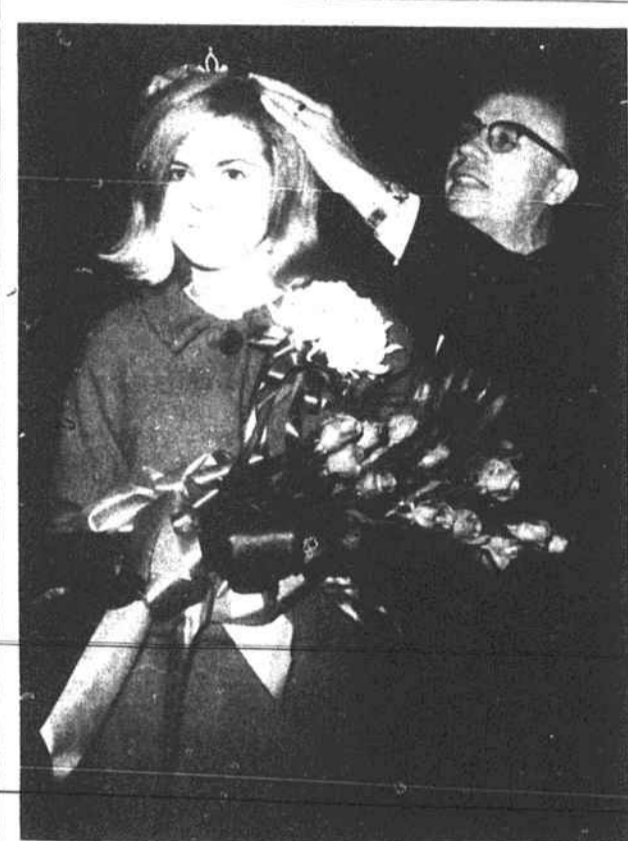

Why Court Amendment Is Needed

Voters who go to the polls next Tuesday, Nov. 2, in North Carolina will have before them a proposal to amend the State Constitution to authorize the Legislature to establish an Intermediate Court of Appeals in the state.

By way of explaining the functions and statutes of such a court, Frank B. Banzet, Warrenton attorney and chairman of the committee to promote the passage of the amendment in Warren County, has furnished an outline of how the proposal would work and explains details of its duties. His statement follows:

As I am sure you are aware, Chapter 377 of the Session Laws of 1965 provides that the creation of an appellate court shall be submitted to the voters of North Carolina in November at the same time the road bond issue is submitted. I am sure you have received some information on the need for this court and actually what the amendment provides, but I thought it would be in the interest of voters of Warren County to generally outline these points.

In the last ten years the number of cases being appealed to our Supreme Court has increased by approximately forty per cent. In 1964, the court heard and rendered over (See AMENDMENT, page 2)

Also To Vote On Court Amendment

The fate of a $500 million dollar road bond issue and a constitutional amendment will be decided by the voters of county and state on next Tuesday, Nov. 2.

The road bond issue, which has been endorsed by the board of county commissioners, the board of town commissioners and a number of other organizations of the county, and which has received the endorsement of most county and state officials, has little opposition. The only organized opposition to the road bond issue is that of the Ku Klux Klan, whose officers have stated that the Klan is unwilling to put the state in hock in order to make Governor Dan K. Moore—a foe of the Klan—look good. The prediction is that the bond issue will pass in both county and state by a wide margin provided that there is a large turnout of voters.

Proponents of the bond issue point out that the money to be provided by the bond issue is badly needed if highways and streets of the state are to be put in good shape, and that the bond issue would cause no increase in gasoline taxes.

Should the bond issue be passed, it is expected that Warren County would be allotted $765,300 from the fund for road construction. Of this amount Warrenton would receive $44,100; Norlina, $36,400; Littleton, $40,200, and Macon $7,300.

Governor Dan K. Moore has given his full endorsement to the bond issue and has asked the people to support it, "This bond issue," he said, "is essential to the continued industrial and agricultural growth of North Carolina. Our needs for good roads are growing constantly, and we cannot afford any undue delay in working to meet these needs." He continued.

"If the bond issue is approved, half of the funds will be spent on the primary highway system, $75 million for secondary roads, and $75 million for parts of the highway system that lies within municipalities. This proposed five-year spending program can be paid for without new taxes, since the state will be able to use the one-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax which has financed the secondary road bond issue of 1940."

The Constitutional amendment would authorize the establishment of an immediate court of appeals. The purpose of the amendment is to lighten the work of the State Supreme Court, and also has the endorsement of the Warren County Board of Commissioners as well as that of state officials and Legislative leaders.

Lindsay C. Warren, chairman of the State of North Carolina Courts Commission, in a recent news release, pointed out that the State Supreme Court is overworked. He said that in the fiscal year 1964 the Supreme Court prepared 419 full written opinions (including 142 curiam opinions). This exceeded the number prepared by the Supreme Courts of California, Florida, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Maryland, Minnesota, New Jersey, Virginia and Washington.

The number of opinions, including per curiam, has been rising steadily over the years, Warren said, and is now nearly 40% higher than it was ten years ago. In a growing state the work load is certain to continue to increase.

The number of written opinions, Warren continued, is only one indication of the work load of the appellate court. It is the most important indication, however.
