IF YOUR ELECTRIC BILL IS HIGHER THIS TIME OF YEAR, HERE'S WHY . . .

Days are shorter, nights are colder and indoor activities more common. So you put more electricity to work for you.

Cold weather appetites require more hot meals so you're likely to use your electric range more frequently. Penetrating winter weather calls for plenty of heat to keep your home comfortably warm in the middle of the coldest cold snap.

There are other ways electricity works harder in winter time. Water enters your water heater at a lower temperature so it takes more electricity to heat it. Lights are in use more. So are the TV, radio and hi-fi.

If your bill is higher this time of year, it's because you're using more electricity to make winter-time living more comfortable and convenient.
