Keeps Him Young

J. R. Bass, an 80-year-old resident of Rocky Mount, is still a leader in his community. And he gives some of the credit to his hobby—growing grapes.

Bass recalls, "Several years ago, Joe Powell, a retired Extension agent, helped me get started in a hobby of growing grapes. It developed into a profitable and enjoyable business for me in my retirement."

At least 200 persons a year visit Bass at his pick-it-yourself vineyard, Joe L. Perry, agricultural Extension agent, Edgecombe County, states. Bass provides the welcome and shares with his visitors the technical knowledge he has gained.

"Bass has done much for the people in his area in the production of grapes and is a real friend and promoter of extension and community resource development," Perry said.

Card Of Thanks

I wish to thank the entire staff of the Warren General Hospital and especially Dr. F. P. Hunter for the fine services rendered me during my recent illness.

Each card, gift and good deed was greatly appreciated.
